Mountie Calls Gaglardi 'Bloody Maniac'

KAMLOOPS (CP) — An RCMP officer said Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi drove like "a bloody maniac" as the B.C. cabinet cavalcade sped here from Prince George Wednesday.

The unidentified officer made the blunt comment after Gaglardi, passing a truck on a hill, refused to pull over for an oncoming car and forced it off the road.

"I was born dangerous, I live dangerous and I'm going to die dangerous," the minister said when asked about his driving Thursday.

'I was born dangerous, I live dangerous and I'm going to die dangerous'

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson admitted he was concerned about the speed with which Premier Bennett and his cabinet are driving on a tour of the province.

The cavalcade, preceded by an RCMP vehicle and including Bennett's chauffeur-driven limousine, has reportedly exceeded the speed limit many times since the tour began in Victoria last Saturday.

But Wednesday, the cavalcade became strung out en route to Kamloops and the RCMP officer said some cars were driving at 90 miles an hour to catch up to the leaders over a highway which is under construction in places.

The incident involving Gaglardi occurred near 100 Mile House as the cavalcade, led by an RCMP car with its red light flashing, pulled out to pass a large truck on a curving hill.

About four vehicles were passing the truck when another car came around the curve. Instead of pulling in behind the truck, Gaglardi accelerated his rented car and passed it, forcing the oncoming car to the shoulder of the road in a cloud of dust and gravel.

Peterson said later he was not in the cavalcade at the time but agreed that the convoy practice is dangerous.

"Convoys are a dangerous way of travelling," he said.

For the second time in two years, a showdown looms between B.C. building trades unions and the B.C. government.

That was the prospect Wednesday in the wake of a Prince George announcement from Labor Minister James Chabot that he would give the shut-down construction industry until noon June 7 to settle its contract differences with the unions or face government-ordered binding arbitration.

In Vancouver, Ed Fay, secretary of the Building Trades Council which represents 18 unions, was adamant in his rejection of the minister's ultimatum.

"This binding arbitration is one law, I'm sorry to say, that we are not going to abide by," said Fay, adding that he's prepared to "go the whole route," even if it means jail for union leaders.

Fay's feeling were backed by Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council secretary John Schibli of Victoria.

"It will be damned interesting to see how CLRA (Construction Labor Relations Association) reacts to this windfall which fell into their laps today when we meet with them Friday morning in Vancouver."

Schibli pointed out that two years ago the construction unions were ordered back to work by the government and refused.

"We were making some headway in our negotiations but I doubt we'll make any after Chabot's statement," Schibli said.

"He's a hypocrite," was the reaction of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council president to Labor Min-

- Succession duties, gift tax cancelled
- New aid for seniors, handicapped, students
- Minimum wage hiked

Bennett Beckons Voters

A wide-ranging package of "money-in-your-pocket" proposals was delivered to B.C. voters Thursday by Premier Bennett in a speech that appeared to set the stage for an election late this summer.

Bennett, speaking at a Kelowna Chamber of Commerce luncheon, labelled his five-point financial assistance program the Kelowna Charter 1972, but B.C. Tories later called it a "steal" of their policies and Liberals scoffed that it was "flim-flam campaign promising."

The proposals would require government action at the next legislative session, which would normally open in January, 1973.

Leading the list of measures offered by Bennett is the cancellation of provincial succession duties and gift taxes.

Other points in the Kelowna Charter:

- A provincial supplementary allowance to senior citizens. Bennett gave no figures.
- An increase in B.C. social assistance benefits to persons who are handicapped through age, mental or physical disability. Size of the hikes was not specified.
- An increase in the minimum wage scale in B.C. from the present $1.50 an hour. Bennett did not say what the increase would be.
- Social assistance to high school and university-aged youth for training on the job through an employees' subsidy in which the government will share in payment of wages and salaries.

Bennett also talked about the government's recent announcement to form a new supply of low-interest loans for the processing of farms products and for secondary manufacturing.

Premier 'Hell-Bent' For Servants' Clash

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Government Employees' Union said Thursday that Premier Bennett "appears hell-bent on provoking a militant confrontation between the provincial government and its employees."

The BCGEU said in a statement that Bennett told a news conference in Kamloops Wednesday night that he would not consider reversing his policy of withholding bargaining rights from provincial employees.

"It almost appears that the premier has not been informed about the recent series of wildcat strikes in the provincial government service," said John Fryer, union general secretary.

He said about 2,000 provincial employees, mostly highways workers, have sacrificed a day's pay by staying off work to draw attention to the bargaining rights issue.

Fryer said he is afraid more and longer disruptions of government services may well be inevitable unless the Premier takes one of his "second looks" at government policy on bargaining for its employees.

Service Policy

Lingual Licks Return

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons opened the door Thursday for another merry-go-round on bilingualism in the public service, agreeing to call the Public Service Commission before a committee to explain any changes in the merit principle of hiring and promotion.

The action followed tabling in the Commons Wednesday of the 1971 PSC annual report. The commission oversees hiring, promotion and classification of about 216,000 federal employees across the country.

Prime Minister Trudeau, making a special statement on the report, said it was tabled "as a routine matter." But press treatment, "possibly based on misunderstanding," was causing concern.

Newspaper reports were that the merit principle is "being abandoned" or is "on the way out," Trudeau said.

America To Keep Power Margin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Within minutes of returning from the Moscow summit, President Nixon told Americans Thursday night that the Soviet-American arms control agreement will assure that "no power on earth . . . will be stronger than the United States of America in the future."

Addressing a joint session of Congress and a nationwide broadcast audience, Nixon said the accords were "in the interest of both nations." He urged their approval by the House and Senate to protect U.S. interests.

"I can assure the Congress and the American people tonight that the present and planned strategic forces of the United States are without question sufficient for the maintenance of our security and the protection of our vital interests," the weary president told applauding legislators in the House chamber.

He reported that the agreements he brought back from his eight-day visit to the Soviet Union represented "the beginning of a process that can lead to a lasting peace."

The president and his wife flew directly to the Capitol by helicopter after their arrival at Andrews Air Force Base from Warsaw, Poland, the last stop in his 13-day, 16,586-mile journey.

Man Spotted with Hong Shortly Before Shooting

A break in the Frank Hong murder case came Thursday when Victoria police issued the description of a man seen talking to the Fisgard Street fish-store owner minutes before he was shot — and appealed to the public for help in finding him.

The Colonist also learned a reward offer may come soon from Victoria's Chinese-Canadian community.

An inquest has been called into the single-shot death for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in McCall's chapel, 1400 Vancouver, before Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

Hong, 44, a native of Victoria and owner of the one-man Rainbow Fish Co. wholesale store at 560 Fisgard, was found in his office shortly after 8:05 a.m. Wednesday, the victim of a shot between the eyes from a .38-calibre weapon. Police still believe the shooting occurred in the course of a robbery attempt.

The discovery was made by his lifelong friend Ed Lum, a Saanich alderman, who used to drop by around 8:05 daily — around 20 minutes after Hong arrived — so they could have a cup of coffee at a nearby restaurant before opening for daily business.

Staff Sgt. Walter Calwell, acting head of the Victoria police detective division, said "an independent witness" saw a man talking to Hong in the front doorway of the store at about 8:05.

The man was described as Caucasian, about 40 years of age, and estimated five feet 10 inches tall, slender, clean

The Marxist Palestinian guerrilla group responsible for the Japanese terrorists' gun-and-grenade attack at Tel Aviv's Lod airport said Thursday it will escalate operations against Israel and "hit the interests of the enemy" everywhere.

The warning came as the death toll in Tuesday's assault rose to 26 and the Lebanese army went on alert in anticipation of Israeli reprisal raids. The Middle East News Agency said Israeli warplanes flew over southern Lebanon for about 20 minutes Wednesday.

A Montreal woman, Mrs. Louna Sabbah, and 15 American citizens from Puerto Rico on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land were among the dead. Another 81 tourists and other civilians were wounded when the three guerrilla-trained Japanese opened up with automatic weapons and grenades against the unsuspecting crowds in the arrival hall.

Israeli authorities late Thursday placed Lod under the tightest security precautions since the 1967 war.

There was no official explanation, but the national radio said authorities fear a hijack attempt and the newspaper Ma'Ariv said earlier that more Japanese radicals were in Europe waiting for a chance to strike.

Phone-Threat Reports Cast Pall Over Lake Cowichan

Fallers, Too, Split in Union Fight

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

LAKE COWICHAN — The road to Lake Cowichan winds through stands of trees that have turned many shades of green in the magic of a brilliant June 1 afternoon. Up ahead, the mountains loom blue and grey and bear the last trace of winter snow.

But in this peaceful setting, and others like it on Vancouver Island, the contentment you would expect to find is not always there.

There is, instead, the sad story of men's conflict, a worsening family fight within B.C.'s biggest union; reports of threats against men and their families.

Viala
. . . cites threats

● Fallers pick six for talks. Page 25

"The cowardly bastards — the cowardly bastards," says a man who is known simply in the forest industry as a faller and who, as such, is among the elite in terms of earning power. In his camp last year, fallers averaged $15,000 to $17,000.

He is a faller who wants to work, but does not because of the wildcat walkout of 800 fallers that began in mid-April.

His remarks are made as he listens to reports that fallers who are opposed to the stoppage are receiving telephone threats.

"The bastards," he repeats.

Fernie Viala, vice-president of the IWA's Duncan local, furnished an affidavit from one man who claims to have been told he had better not report for work "if you know what's good for you."

Viala and other officers of the local say there have been reported threats to burn down homes or put sugar in car gasoline tanks.

But the report that brings the curse from the one faller is that some phone calls are made to wives and children of fallers while the fallers are away from home.

Olson
. . . faith in ethics

At Lake Cowichan on this fine afternoon, four militant fallers who represent the other side — who back the walkout fully — express grave doubts about the authenticity of the alleged threats.

Nels Olson, who has lived the 47 years of his life at Lake Cowichan, and who has carved his living out of the woods like his father did before him, seems saddened by the fact that such reports would crop up.

"I don't know of anyone who would do this," he said quietly. He bases this on his

Weak Government

ALL the beautiful propaganda notwithstanding, we are not getting our money's worth out of our elected representatives at either the provincial or federal level.

Both levels of government spend (waste?) hundreds of thousands of dollars telling us how much they're doing for us, what a great place it is to live because of their policies and, in effect, saying we never had it so good.

Rot, rubbish, nonsense and claptrap. We have never had so many problems and never had such lack of leadership, understanding and or accomplishment.

VANCOUVER sports high rises of garbage. The place smells as high as Crofton on a calm day. The garbage men are on strike with other civic workers and far more people suffer than just those on strike. A civic problem? At the start, yes, now it should be crystal clear the provincial government should have long ago moved to halt the nonsense and get the thing back on the rails.

The CLRA struggle with the various trade unions? Mr. Chabot, with the full support of Mr. Bennett, expends considerable energy doing nothing to resolve the dispute. The government is playing politics, making an election issue.

THE WHOLE country stagnates because of labor trouble. Government leadership is weak, government knuckles under in a most sickening manner. Are we to have such disruption every year? Can government not see the absolute waste of such disruption?

All normal methods have been exhausted and found inadequate. The mandate of government demands we be governed and therefore government must use the necessary laws to keep the country on an even keel. Some day, some government will have the guts to call a halt. Some government will say that wages, prices and interest will henceforth be regulated.

YOU SAY labor would never sit still for it? Don't believe it. Labor — the rank and file — would welcome such stability, would welcome the security of month to month, year to year conditions that would be beyond the threat of strike or lockout.

We have countless problems in British Columbia. Where is the leadership? Running around the "heartland" of the province playing at taking the cabinet to the people — a farcical exercise designed not to govern, but to propagandize the public re the virtues of Social Credit in an election year.

CAR INSURANCE might be hiked a further eight per cent, which would make a 28 per cent increase in the last three years. Will the A-G, Les Peterson renege on his promise of a year ago that there would be no rate hikes? Or will the inflation spiral be allowed to spiral just a little more.

We expect our leaders to look at, investigate and implement new methods — like new methods of bringing relief to the suffering. Our minister of health, Ralph Loffmark, continues to ignore the art of acupuncture. It is my considered opinion Mr. Loffmark knows nothing about this method of Chinese healing, but that he takes the word of the British Columbia Medical Association, which also, unfortunately, knows little or nothing about it.

AT LEAST in the United States the medics appear openminded enough to research the subject — they are trying to fathom the mysteries of a 5,000 year-old healing process. I kid you not, I have received a minimum of three inquiries per day for the past nine months re acupuncture. I have now had to stop giving out the name of the Vancouver acupuncturist because the man is snowed under with patients — he simply can not handle any more.

I wonder why my elected representative, Dr. Scott Wallace, has not pushed the government, not pushed the health minister to at least make meaningful and unprejudicial analysis of the subject.

WE EXPECT government to be niggardly in its handling of our tax money. But instead, we have the federal government wasting thousands on unbelievable con games that scheme money out of Opportunity For Youth funds. Have our two Davids, Anderson and Groos, done anything to stop such prolific squander? If they have, it has been very secretive and very ineffectual.

This country has never had so many problems — even during war years. Worries are piled on worries. And we are not getting any answers or solutions.

We never-had-it-so-good is a lie. Politicians know it's a lie and they spew it with straight faces.

Speechless Child

By G. C. Thostegon, MD

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son, now 2½ and an otherwise intelligent child, does not talk. By this I mean that any conversation he holds, with the exception of a few words, can be understood only by me.

I have tried to correct this but he still refuses to talk clearly. My pediatrician assures me there is absolutely nothing wrong, and that he will talk when he feels it necessary. — V.C.

There can be a difference between not talking and not talking clearly, but it sounds as though this may be some of both.

If a child does not talk at all by the age of one year, it's high time to have a checkup to make sure that his hearing, intelligence and vocal apparatus aren't at fault. But you've done that.

Best I can do is to cite some of the factors that can be involved when a child is "slow" about learning to talk well.

For one, the youngster who doesn't have playmates may not develop speech as readily, maybe some time in nursery school would be good for this little fellow. After all, the need to communicate is the strongest motive for learning to talk.

In that regard, don't be too quick to anticipate what a child wants. If he gets things by making some garbled sounds, his motivation to speak clearly is less.

While you understand his mangled language (evidently he knows the words he wants to use, but doesn't say them well) don't under any circumstances copy his versions of the words. Some mothers talk baby talk to their youngsters and wonder why the little ones keep on baby-talking. What do they expect? Children learn by imitation.

You may be doing a little too good a job of interpreting his lingo, and if he finds that he has to make the words come out more clearly to make himself understood, he will.

the matter was important and the report should be referred to a committee for clarification.

Reacting to Thursday's developments, the PSC put out a release saying it "never has been the intention of the commission to abandon or in any way undermine" the merit principle.

It added that the commission sees its role as the guardian of the principle as its "sole reason for existence."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democrat leader David Lewis, however, said language in the report gave a clear indication that some changes in the merit principle apparently are afoot.

If there had been any confusion in the press reports, Stanfield said, it was justifiable "in view of the confusing rhetoric" used in the PSC report.

Lewis said he could not imagine the PSC commissioners "writing these passages without something being in their minds having to do with the merit system and with an intention to erode it."

The PSC report said the commission has started action to increase the number of Francophones, women and native peoples in the public service because of their low representation in the past.

The merit system, it said, had failed to give Canada "a representational public service."

There was a growing feeling that the imbalance in representation was due to a too narrow interpretation of the merit principle.

In other developments:

● The Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada said in Ottawa it is "shocked" at the implication that the PSC is considering changing the merit system of hiring and promoting civil servants. The institute represents professionals in the service.

● The greater role for women, the young, French-Canadians and native people in the federal government bureaucracy was advocated by John Carson, federal PSC chairman.

There's no way the service can claim to represent Canadian society if it remains white, male, middle-aged and English-speaking, Carson said in Ottawa.

Police said the man was seen "in a normal conversation" with Hong. They said the man might have been there for an innocent purpose and, if so, they would like to talk to him about anything he might have seen.

If not, police asked anyone who saw the man or may know something about him and the conversation to notify the detective division at 384-4111 as soon as possible.

Calwell continued to decline comment on a possible motive but it was learned police had not ruled out a robbery attempt even though Hong's wallet was found beside his body.

The wallet was found to contain $35 and a slightly larger amount of money was in a small office safe. Friends of Hong's said Wednesday he was known to have little money in his store, which did only a small retail business.

Spokesmen for Victoria's Chinese-Canadian community said they were considering the possibility of offering a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the death. No amount was mentioned.

In Vancouver later, new B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson said of the Kelowna Charter: "Basically, it is just a bit of flim-flam campaign promising. He's had 20 years to do this."

Conservative leader Derril Warren, also in Vancouver, cheerfully applauded Bennett's proposals, claiming the premier had finally seen the Tory light — because the charter was mostly "a steal" of Conservative policy.

New Democratic leader Dave Barrett said only that Bennett "has been on an election tour."

Anderson, who is also Liberal MP for the Esquimalt-Saanich riding, said: "Mr. Bennett, whose popularity at the polls is slipping steadily, has been trying to get back in power by promising to provide people various goodies."

Anderson noted that about 98 per cent of every pensioner's dollar is paid by the federal government. "What amazes me is that it has taken so long for Bennett to come out with a system for improving this."

The Liberal leader said he is pleased Bennett plans to repeal the gift tax which was introduced during the last legislative session. He said the Liberal party fought against such a tax during the session.

"Bennett is the only man I know who can put through bad legislation and take credit for removing it. Any other premier in Canada would be ashamed to do such a thing."

Anderson challenged Bennett to use his discretion as finance minister to stop collecting gift taxes immediately. He also challenged the premier to refund monies collected under the gift tax legislation.

Warren said Bennett appeared to have "lifted" major policy planks from the Tory platform, as outlined during the last session of the Legislature by Scott Wallace of Oak Bay and by Warren himself in public speeches outside the house.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The flood threat along the Similkameen River in British Columbia's southern interior eased Thursday and attention switched to the upper and lower reaches of the Fraser River.

The rising Fraser flooded some low-lying areas near Prince George in central B.C. and in the Fraser Valley east of here, but there was no indication of any major crisis as yet.

Several families were reported evacuated in the Langley area 25 miles east of here and farmers were moving livestock to higher ground, but Ian Faulkner, secretary of the Emergency Flood Control Committee, said the situation had not reached the emergency stage.

Areas of Gottonwood Island, a low-lying suburb of Prince George situated at the junction of the Fraser and Nechako Rivers, and of South Fort George, another suburb, suffered some minor flooding. But no evacuations were reported and property damage apparently was minor.

Meantime, Mines Minister Frank Richter paid a short visit Thursday to the interior community of Keremeos, centre of an area about 200 miles east of here which has suffered flooding since Monday.

MELUN, France (UPI) — A motorcycle policeman thought something was strange when he saw six Senegalese approaching Paris in an Italian taxi.

After questioning, the Senegalese said they had entered the country illegally in hopes of finding work by taking a taxi from Milan. All involved, including the Italian cab driver, will be tried.

Security Too Tight

Pat Jabs Polish Agent

WARSAW (UPI) — First Lady Pat Nixon, losing her poise briefly on her last morning abroad, rebelled publicly Thursday against the tight protective security that has surrounded her throughout the president's 13-day summit trip.

She pushed one plainclothes Polish agent aside with her hands and squeezed past others with a lady-like elbow in the ribs to reach a Warsaw crowd grasping for her hand in the warm shunshine of Lazienki Park, where she had gone to hear a Chopen concert.

"Can't we tell the secret police to stand aside?" she asked her companions in exasperation. "Goodness. I've never seen such people."

When an American embassy aide said, "Let me help," Mrs. Nixon snapped back, "I don't need any help!"

She complained to her two secret service agents that "I want to say hello to the people." It was a complaint she had voiced last week during a visit to gum department store in Moscow, where zealous soviet guards forcefully kept spectators and reporters away at a distance.

At Lazienki Park, Mrs. Nixon took matters into her own hands when her personal guards could offer no help in getting her past the Polish police cordon.

Once she broke through, the crowd loved it. Women came up to shake hands and touch her. Little girls exchanged bouquets of carnations for a hug, a kiss and a "Hi, honey" greeting from the U.S. president's wife.

When a man gave her a handful of pink daisies and a letter with an undisclosed message, Mrs. Nixon placed her hands on his shoulders. She hugged and apologized for lack of time to a woman who asked in English, "It is also possible to see the president?"

One 19-year-old girl gave her an album of photographs taken in 1959 when Mrs. Nixon, accompanying the then vice-president from an earlier trip to Moscow, visited the girls' nursery school in the Polish capital.

At one point during her morning stroll behind guards, Mrs. Nixon turned to Mrs. Henryk Jablonski, wife of the Polish president, and asked, "Tell them there are too many of them . . . shall we walk ahead? There are so many men around."

Barge Service Ended by CP

KELOWNA (CP) — Barge service on Okanagan Lake has ended after 76 years of operation. Canadian Pacific, which started the service in 1896 with purchase of the Columbia and Kootenay Steam Navigation Co., said 10 crew members and seven relief workers will be given other positions and sentres previously served by barge will get truck service.

Flood Threat Shifts

Upper Fraser Now High

VANCOUVER (CP) — The flood threat along the Similkameen River in British Columbia's southern interior eased Thursday and attention switched to the upper and lower reaches of the Fraser River.

The rising Fraser flooded some low-lying areas near Prince George in central B.C. and in the Fraser Valley east of here, but there was no indication of any major crisis as yet.

Several families were reported evacuated in the Langley area 25 miles east of here and farmers were moving livestock to higher ground, but Ian Faulkner, secretary of the Emergency Flood Control Committee, said the situation had not reached the emergency stage.

Areas of Cottonwood Island, a low-lying suburb of Prince George situated at the junction of the Fraser and Nechako Rivers, and of South Fort George, another suburb, suffered some minor flooding. But no evacuations were reported and property damage apparently was minor.

Meantime, Mines Minister Frank Richter paid a short visit Thursday to the interior community of Keremeos, centre of an area about 200 miles east of here which has suffered flooding since Monday.

Richter met with Keremeos Mayor Stan Pollard and other village officials to discuss the situation, which has eased considerably since the similkameen and its tributary streams caused some evacuations and property damage earlier in the week.

The easing of the flood threat along the Similkameen brought relief to hundreds of weary work crews, many of them volunteers, who hauled gravel and filled sandbags to shore up weak points in the system of dikes protecting centres such as Princeton, Hedley and Cawston. Most property damage was caused by water seeping through the dikes.

Also, the tiny community of Howser north of the Duncan Lake Dam is marooned by floodwaters that have covered the road to the north and south of Howser, 30 miles north of Kaslo.

Two families evacuated their homes near the Lardeau River Thursday after high waters from it ate away half the width of the roadway between it and their homes. Only the road is holding the water back.

Washington's churning Okanagan River chewed through dirt and sandbag levees and forced hundreds of persons from their homes Thursday as the threat of serious spring flooding began materializing across the U.S. northwest.

In Search of Security

IN THE CAMPS OF BOTH West and East alliances preparations are in hand for a European security conference and a complementary agreement on the reduction of armed forces.

The 15-member-states signatory to the North Atlantic Treaty have agreed to prepare for the security talks and all but France intend to explore mutual balanced force reductions.

Meanwhile, in Moscow a meeting of Warsaw Pact nations has been called. Although the announcement does not say so there is no doubt it will be concerned with the same program that is engaging NATO.

The fact that the Moscow meeting is scheduled "within the next few days" illustrates the urgency of decision in these matters from the viewpoint of the Soviet Union.

But if anything is certain in this complicated military-political situation it is that agreement will not be reached either easily or quickly. Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath, in fact, has intimated that he is more concerned with Western European political integration than with other approaches to security. That is one reason why he was so determined to lead Britain into the European Economic Community.

Most Western states hope, if they do not quite believe, that reduction of arms and armed forces in cautious cadence by NATO and Warsaw Pact nations will encourage political detente. And it seems logical to expect that diminishing the military confrontation would bring greater security.

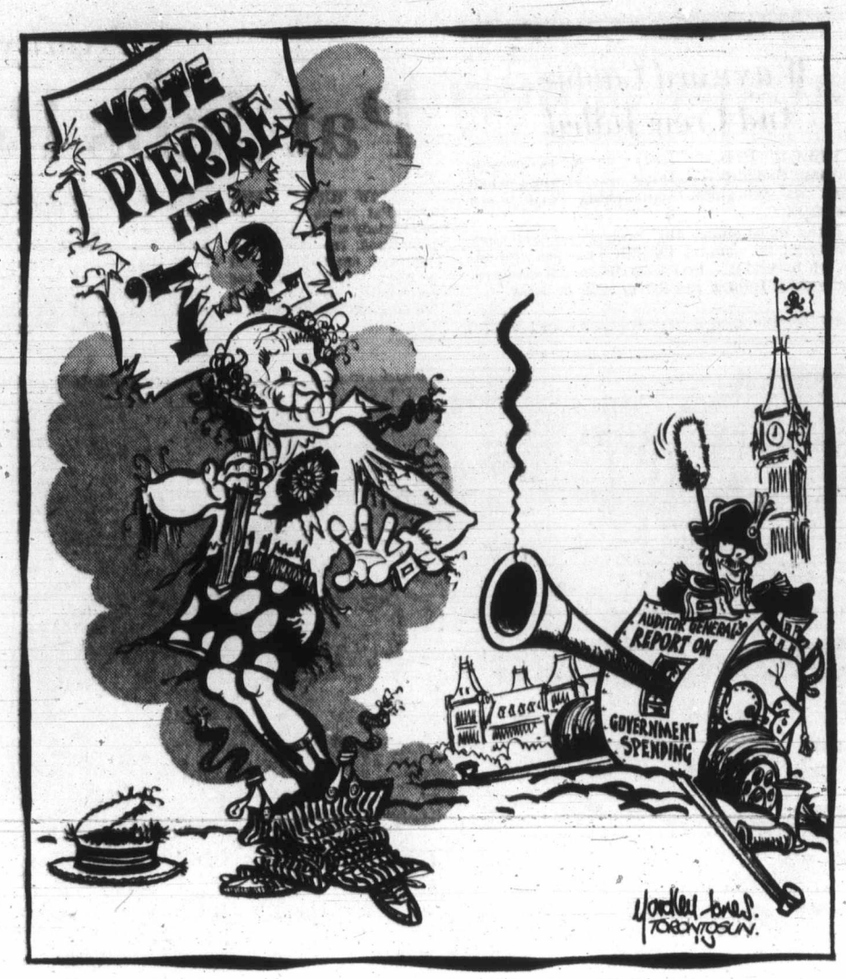

"To see mutual balanced force reductions in an exclusively military context has its attractions, particularly for Western public opinion, which tends to believe that the absence of military forces means peace," says a release of the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London. "But making military balance the only yardstick of force reduction means that the scope and speed of arms control will be defined by Soviet and Warsaw Pact readiness to reciprocate reductions."

The difficulty here is the Soviet Union's two-front dilemma. Moscow has only recently become enthusiastic about mutual force reductions in Europe. In Europe, let it be remembered. Assuming reciprocal demobilization, division by division, the advantages to the power with the greater numerical strength are obvious. So some other formula must be found. But can there be any such thing as balanced force reductions if Moscow finds it imperative to keep massive military strength available on the farther side of the Urals? There would be nothing to prevent its diversion to reinforce a policy that was not acceptable to the West.

The intention is not to cast doubt on the probity of the Moscow administration, but simply to emphasize the nature of the task before the negotiators.

It is inescapable, surely, that Mr. Heath's priority for the fuller integration of the Western powers through the medium of the European economic community, and ultimately the sort of political union visualized by Sir Winston Churchill, provides the surer way to West European security.

Let the nations reduce their armies and slash their production of arms by all means, but even the most drastic economies in that direction are no guarantees of peace. Peace, of course, is the meaning of security.

Cruel Provocation

THE CRUEL AND SENSELESS massacre at Tel Aviv's Lod Airport has shocked the world and goaded the people of Israel into a state of mind that would accept reprisal in kind.

The mass murder of innocents — many of them not even Israelis, if that makes any difference — has possibly lost to the Arab cause much of the sympathy to which it is entitled in the dispute with Israel.

It will be a long time before people forget the delighted reaction of the crowds in some Arab capitals and the boast of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine that its agents were responsible for the indiscriminate killing.

This carefully planned outrage, the Popular Front proudly acknowledges, was in retaliation for the slaying of two Arab guerrillas who were attempting to pirate an airliner, under threat of destroying it and all the passengers on board, at the same airport at Tel Aviv. That affair occurred early in May. The assassins had been preparing for their grisly attack for three months. But for the Popular Front the hijacking deaths provided as good an excuse as any other.

But however great the provocation, it cannot justify the sort of retaliation that is feared in Palestinian communities just across the Lebanon border from Israel. Nor can the fact that Israel gave notice to the United Nations of intended retaliation. That would be a descent to the same level of animal cruelty the Popular Front's guerrillas and hirelings reached. The Palestinian villagers are no more the proper targets for revenge that were the Puerto Rican pilgrim women shot down in Tel Aviv.

The Israeli threat was made when Prime Minister Golda Meir and her government were in a state of shock. It is to be hoped they are recovered sufficiently to direct their anger to the right quarter.

It is too much to expect that in their righteous wrath they are likely to forgive and forget. But they would earn the world's respect if they should show restraint.

National Convention in July

Perils and Possibilities for Democrats

By WILLIAM MILLINSHIP from Washington

CURRENT conventional wisdom has it that something nasty is bound to happen to the Democratic Party at its national convention in Miami Beach in July.

Some possibilities frequently mentioned are: There will be chaos and mayhem over the selection of delegates; divisions will be so acute that the party will split with a minority marching out to nominate a presidential candidate of its own; the convention will be deadlocked and will nominate Senator George McGovern, who will be swept away by a pro-Richard Nixon landslide, comparable to Senator Barry Goldwater's defeat at the hand of Lyndon Johnson in 1964.

The trouble with conventional wisdom in this peculiar election year is that it has so far proved totally unreliable as a guide to what may actually happen. Only a few months ago, hardly any columnists or pundits took the McGovern candidacy seriously. It was taken for granted that Senator Edmund Muskie would sweep from success to success in the primary elections and arrive at the convention the obvious choice for the Democratic nomination.

Muskie was knocked out of the primaries at a comparatively early stage, despite the brilliant array of endorsements he had assembled, and McGovern is now being taken very seriously indeed.

That upset is being explained and future disaster for the Democrats forecast on the assumption that the American electorate is in the grip of a strange anti-Establishment mood, fed up with professional politicians and politics as usual. While psychoanalysing a whole nation is a perilous undertaking, there does seem to be a lot of truth in this interpretation. The successes in the primaries by McGovern and Governor George Wallace, both in their own way anti-Establishment figures, point in this direction.

But at least as much attention should be paid to recent reforms in the Democratic Party when trying to understand what has happened so far and why there is so much uncertainty about what will occur at the July convention.

The reforms grew out of the disastrous Democratic Convention in Chicago in 1968, when Hubert Humphrey won the nomination amid bitter wrangling inside the convention hall and violent demonstrations and what has been called a "police riot" outside it.

The party decided it could not afford a repeat of Chicago, and set up a commission on party structure and delegate selection to propose reforms in the whole procedure of nominating the presidential candidate. The chairman of that 28-member commission was none other that Senator George McGovern.

The commission met for the first time on March 1, 1969, and began the laborious process of studying the methods which state party organizations used to select the delegates they sent to the national convention.

The commission's findings and proposed guidelines for reform were published in its report in April 1970.

It noted that, while the party believed in "participation and popular control," in fact "meaningful participation of Democratic voters in the choice of their presidential nominee was often difficult or costly, sometimes completely illusory, and, in not a few instances, impossible."

The report said: "In at least 20 states, there were no (or inadequate) rules for the selection of convention delegates, leaving the entire process to the discretion of a handful of party leaders."

Obstacles to participation of the rank and file were many, and varied from state to state, but the result was that "the delegates to the 1968 Democratic National Convention were predominantly white, male, middle-aged, and at least middle-class." Women, the young, the poor and racial minorities were all seriously under-represented.

The reforms adopted as the result of this report have already had a far-reaching effect in opening up the delegate selection process at all levels. It is hardly an accident that George McGovern, who grasped the significance of the reforms at an early stage, now has more delegates committed to him than has any of his rivals.

McGovern formally declared himself a candidate for nomination early in 1971 — 18 months before the convention — and methodically set about building up a massive grass-roots organization not only in the states with primary elections but in others employing less glamorous methods of choosing convention delegates.

Senator Muskie's fundamental mistake was in placing too much trust in the influence of the party luminaries who endorsed him, instead of building a strong campaign organization at the local level.

Muskie, as the acknowledged front-runner, also felt obliged to enter all the early primaries and dissipated his money and energy, while McGovern concentrated his effort where he believed it would make the most impact.

But McGovern has picked up many delegates in the non-primary states by sending supporters in force and well-briefed on the new rules into local meetings, where the selection process began. The new rules helped by forbidding the use of proxy votes and requiring state organizations to ensure that the dates and places of delegate selection meetings were adequately publicized.

McGovern's volunteer army has brought off successes in such apparently unlikely places as Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma, and quietly added to the delegate strength he won in the primary states.

If, as seems true, local party machines had in any case lost much of their power through some national change in mood, then the new rules must also be credited with strongly reinforcing this tendency.

To some observers, democracy threatens to run wild at Miami Beach. Certainly there is little prospect of deals in "smoke-filled rooms" on anything like the scale of past conventions.

It is hard to predict at this stage just how the deals that have to be made, if the party is to emerge united, will be accomplished in July.

The Democratic National Committee chairman, Lawrence O'Brien, himself concedes that there are "plenty of potential pitfalls." It will, for instance, require a great deal of goodwill to avoid bitter disputes over the challenges that will be made against some state delegations on the grounds that women, or blacks or the young are under-represented.

But, if the many pitfalls are avoided, the party could come out of the convention, not in terrible disarray, as the Cassandras predict, but strengthened in a way that can appeal to the country's new mood.

Politicians Live With Uncertainty

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

AND how do the politicians feel about Prime Minister Trudeau's forecast of a "prosperous, sunny and election-free summer?"

Reconciled to uncertainty and prepared for it.

They remember how in 1968, when he became Liberal leader and prime minister, he said he had no intention then of calling an election — and almost overnight there they were, all busy campaigning.

How former Prime Minister Lester Pearson seemed to give every indication he was in no hurry to go to the polls, there being so much parliamentary work to do, and then called a press conference to announce the race was on.

"I don't really care when the election is," says Murray McBride, first-term Liberal MP for the Ottawa Valley's Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton. "If the PM changes his mind, it'll be sooner — if not, then later — but I'm ready any time.

"It's sort of like going to the dentist. You'd like to get it over with, yet you don't mind putting it off.

"The big issue in The Valley is the same now as it has been and will be later, the anti-French, anti-Quebec thing. It runs silent and deep and I don't know how you handle it except hope, as I do, there are more reasonable people in The Valley than most people think."

Harold Stafford, another first-term Liberal, from Western Ontario's industrial-agricultural Elgin riding, is enormously pleased that the election's off until later.

"And I'm counting on the PM to keep his word," he says. "Right now a campaign would be a nightmare. All my farmers are out on the land and they'd be furious to have me interrupt them after slogging a mile or so across their land, filling my shoes with soil and fertilizer.

"Sometime soon the big Ford plant at Talbotville will be shutting down for a three-week vacation and all those votes will be spread from there to Parry Sound through the cottage country.

"Next fall or early winter everybody'll be home, ready to answer the door when I knock and maybe listen to the old election pitch. But not now."

Max Saltsman, three-term New Democratic MP for Central Ontario's Waterloo, says, "now or later — makes no difference — now I'm an MP — later, 10 days after the PM calls the election, I'll be a candidate.

"Haven't done a campaign thing yet. No lawn signs ready. No placards. Nothing.

"But I'm set to get it all together the day after the PM gives the word.

"I figure the extra time is good for us. Gives us a further chance to weed out the Waffle which hurt us so badly in the Ontario provincial election."

Pat Nowlan, two-term Conservative MP for the Annapolis Valley, says "It doesn't matter to me — in my riding any time's election time, June through October.

"Church suppers. Fish fries. Shore dinners. Harvest balls.

"Spring, summer, fall — it doesn't matter in Blossom Valley — it's all great living, great visiting, great eating — holiday time in holiday country.

"Feel sorry for those city guys though. Padding up and down those hot dusty streets, knocking on doors and not a strawberry pie this side of the supermarket freezer."

One of "those city guys," Robert McCleave, veteran, six-Parliament Conservative MP for Halifax-East-Hants, says, "Any time is election time for me. I've got my campaign case packed and I'm ready for travelling door to door.

"Sure, perhaps it's a little easier to get help in the late summer, or fall, with more people at home. But even in June and July everyone isn't away on holidays.

"I figure you're campaigning all the time you're an MP — that is, if you're doing your job for the constituency — and if you haven't been, it's too late to start after the PM calls the election. It's the year-round effort, the consistent performance that gets the vote; not the sudden, scared, pre-election spurt."

On Ground in Vietnam

War Has Been Handed Over

By MARK FRANKLAND from Saigon

SOME people may still believe the Americans are still running the war in Vietnam — that the U.S. commander, General Creighton Abrams, tells the South Vietnamese general staff what to do, while Americans in helicopters fly over the battlefields giving orders to Vietnamese ground troops.

Many American military advisers would be happy if that were so, but they laugh if anybody suggests it is really happening. Far from having much control over the South Vietnamese army, they sometimes have very little information about what it is doing.

"There's an American TV commercial about a man whose job it is to repair a well-known make of washing machine," said one American colonel, trying to describe his job. "The ad has him saying he's the loneliest man in town because the washing machine works so well no one has to ring him up. That's how I feel sometimes. No one rings me up. No one asks for my advice."

A major described how he is treated by the three Vietnamese battalion commanders with whom he goes on operations. "One ignores me completely. Another sometimes tells me what he is doing. Only the third tries to keep me in the picture. He probably thinks that helps me when I am calling in American air strikes. But he doesn't ask my advice."

Of course the Americans still do try to get things done their way, sometimes over small matters, sometimes over big. Just before the Communist siege closed in on An Loc town early in April the American general who is adviser to the Third Military Region (Saigon and its surrounding provinces) went to the commander of the 5th Division. He counselled the Vietnamese general to get his men out patrolling around the town but, as one American put it later, "The words went in one ear and out the other." The general and two regiments of his division stayed put in their defensive positions and the Communists had no problem surrounding the town.

The American advice is taken sometimes, of course. Another major described how he had written a letter to a Vietnamese regimental commander pointing out what was wrong with one of his new firebases. The Vietnamese did not acknowledge the letter, but the American noticed that over the next few weeks the weaknesses he had pointed out in the base were corrected.

Every adviser one talks to agrees that his main job is to provide and direct American air strikes in support of the Vietnamese troops. His second most important function is to provide an alternative source of information about what is going on.

Some advisers doubt the need for the first, and the value of the second. Everyone agrees that Saigon's army needs American air power. The South Vietnamese air force can be very good (its slower planes are often more effective in giving close support than the modern American jets). But alone it cannot provide the massive bombing that has come to be considered the South Vietnamese army's right. And as long as American planes are needed, the argument goes, you need American advisers with South Vietnamese units on the ground to direct the air strikes. This can be a complicated business, particularly if there are several units on the ground and the U.S. jets (which have rather short flying time) are waiting impatiently to drop their bombs.

However, there are advisers who believe that complicated or not the Vietnamese should do the job themselves, despite the fact that not enough Vietnamese soldiers speak English to talk to the American forward air controller who brings in the air strikes. Advisers dislike being made to report through their own channels on what the Vietnamese are up to. "This makes us just little tattle-tales," one colonel said. But some Vietnamese generals do like to use the Americans to check on their own officers, and there are also senior Americans to check on their own men out at battalion level so that they can still feel in the thick of things.

One gets the feeling from the younger advisers in particular that even the present amount of American involvement is too much, and that the South Vietnamese army should be left to fight its own battles without having American officers fussing around like anxious mother hens. Perhaps the South Vietnamese would win, perhaps they would lose. These young Americans are coming to believe that it is no longer America's business since America no longer has any real power of direction.

The figures alone are eye-catching: in 1970 Thailand's hill tribes contributed 185 metric tons of raw opium to the world's supply, Burma 1,000 tons, Laos 100.

It is true that most of the opium, or about 800 tons, is consumed by South-east Asians from Rangoon to Hong Kong. Nonetheless, about 400 tons continue to leave the area, bound for addicts around the world.

So vast are these supplies (U.S. addicts, for example, consume annually the heroin derived from "only" 120 metric tons of opium), so limitless the profits, that governments, armies and revolutionary fronts have played parts in the production and trade through the years.

They continue to do so, and even the United States Central Intelligence Agency has had its days in the poppy fields.

Vietnam War Creates Boom

The Vietnam war and the complex and confusing movement of "foreigners" back and forth through Southeast Asia has created a boom in the illicit production of raw opium.

Today, in Thailand alone, it is estimated that half of the 350,000 hill people in the elevated areas of the north participate in growing poppies.

Thirty per cent of these workers are addicts themselves, but they turn a tiny profit by the standards of the million-or-billion-dollar deals we are accustomed to associating with narcotics.

The average worker earns about $100 a year and has, incidentally, no real knowledge of what he is doing.

A Routi... In...

By SHANE STEVENS
From New York

The girl in my building is running scared.

She had a six-inch knife jammed against her throat in the hallway downstairs.

Knocked to the ground from behind, she fell against the stairs. The knife was on her before she could react.

"Don't move, don't scream, don't talk."

"We're not going to hurt you, bitch. We just want your money."

"Yeah, the money. You better have money or I'll chop your face into Christmas ribbon."

The youth gave a short hysterical laugh.

Governments, Armies Mixed-Up in Rich Opium Trade

Southeast Asia, Not Mideast, Chief Source of Heroin

Dr. Hans J. Spielmann of the University of Heidelberg in Germany has traveled for many years throughout Southeast Asia and is an expert on the opium traffic there.

By HANS J. SPIELMANN
From Bangkok, Thailand

The world's attention in recent months has been turned toward the Mideast — Turkey, principally — as the source of illicit supplies of heroin. But the fact is that the fabled "fertile triangle" of Southeast Asia — Thailand, Burma and Laos — continues to produce two-thirds of the world's known supply of opium, from which heroin is derived.

The figures alone are eye-catching: in 1970 Thailand's hill tribes contributed 185 metric tons of raw opium to the world's supply, Burma 1,000 tons, Laos 100.

It is true that most of the opium, or about 800 tons, is consumed by South-east Asians from Rangoon to Hong Kong. Nonetheless, about 400 tons continue to leave the area, bound for addicts around the world.

So vast are these supplies (U.S. addicts, for example, consume annually the heroin derived from "only" 120 metric tons of opium), so limitless the profits, that governments, armies and revolutionary fronts have played parts in the production and trade through the years.

They continue to do so, and even the United States Central Intelligence Agency has had its days in the poppy fields.

Vietnam War Creates Boom

The Vietnam war and the complex and confusing movement of "foreigners" back and forth through Southeast Asia has created a boom in the illicit production of raw opium.

Today, in Thailand alone, it is estimated that half of the 350,000 hill people in the elevated areas of the north participate in growing poppies.

Thirty per cent of these workers are addicts themselves, but they turn a tiny profit by the standards of the million-or-billion-dollar deals we are accustomed to associating with narcotics.

The average worker earns about $100 a year and has, incidentally, no real knowledge of what he is doing.

That is to say, the hill people do not even know that they are producing an illicit product for a world market; they have been growing the poppies and using the opium in lieu of pain-killing medicines for about 150 years.

The production of opium only became illegal in Thailand in 1958, as did trafficking and smoking, and the hill people really could not understand that they were outlaws.

Not to worry, as things developed: production went on unabated.

Common Market

As it is now, there is a sort of common market in opium operative in Southeast Asia.

National boundaries are crossed by an assortment of rogues who, while moving tons of the stuff, "lose" only two or three per cent as bribes and tributes and so forth.

The operation begins with the fields in the high country (over 3,000 feet above sea level for the high-quality poppy) of Thailand, Laos and Burma.

The hill people themselves have neither the courage, contacts nor funds to enter into the distribution, so they await the sharp lowlanders.

These townsmen come around at harvest time, looking down their noses at the hill people whom they consider to be inferior, and buy the opium at very low prices.

The best buy is in Burma, where a kilo of raw opium sells for $15; in Laos it's $30, and in Thailand $40.

Opium is gathered in the villages and then in ever-larger towns by smugglers, who become rather more than that as the opium changes hands and the supplies pile up.

Paramilitary Operation

Then highly disciplined paramilitary types take over, with toughness and sure-handedness.

Among these is an outfit known as the Shan of Northern Burma — relatives of the Thais — whose dream, at least back in Burma, was the establishment of an autonomous Shan State.

But its fighting wing, the Shan Liberation Army, has generally abandoned politics as it observed the fertile fields of Shan asylum in northern Thailand.

Units of the front transport the opium grown in Burma (and this is the mother lode — 700 metric tons for export) to bases in Thailand.

Of course, as units cross the Burmese-Thai border, back and forth, back and forth, the talk is all politics and the dream of statehood, but it's camouflage for the real action, which is the opium.

The Shan has somewhat complex, but strict, working arrangements with the notorious Kuomintang (whose parent organization is Nationalist Chinese) troops of the fertile triangle.

Sometimes the Shan and the Kuomintang trade arms and ammunition, and medicines — often purchased from U.S. stocks in Laos — for opium.

10,000 Men Under Arms

They say that they carry out pro-U.S. espionage in Burma, and even claim forays into China for "anti-communist" activities.

But these units are no longer used and supplied by the United States or Taiwan, as they once were, although they maintain radio contact with each other.

The Kuomintang is said now to have 10,000 men under arms, chiefly in Thailand, but in Burma and Laos as well.

Frequently, Kuomintang caravans of between 300 and 500 men, plus horses and mules carrying contraband for trade, can be seen working toward the north of Thailand and Laos toward Burma, Burma.

They are supplied along the way with food by villagers eager to please such impressive forces, and eager to make extra money or to acquire some unusual luxuries.

Once they make their contacts — either with Shan troops or with smugglers — the Kuomintang caravan can pack up as much as 15 tons of opium for the return trip southward.

It is said that these troops and their "allied contractors" transport between 450 and 500 tons of raw opium southward each year. Their profit mark-up is 200 per cent.

Must Pay Tributes

One arrangement that the Kuomintang and the Shan have is that each Kuomintang convoy that goes into certain poppy-growing territory actually controlled by Shan troops must pay tribute.

This amounts to about $1.50 a kilo, and entitles the caravan to a transit letter and Shan escorts back to territory controlled by the Kuomintang. (In other areas Shan convoys must pay tribute to Kuomintang soldiers — the reverse situation.)

As noted, there are a great many addicts in Southeast Asia, and the Kuomintang troops sell off a good deal of the opium back in Thailand. They get four to six times what they paid.

But most of it is headed for export — for quick dashes across more borders, to airports and train stations, to seaports, to Bangkok, Singapore, Hong Kong, Vientiane and Saigon. And on and on.

And if this meant the continued production of opium in the sensitive areas — say in the fertile fields where Laos, Burma and Thailand come together — that was all right with the U.S.

United States Special Forces, or Green Berets, and the CIA were at one time up to here in the traffic — for, to be sure, political reasons.

Green Berets were ordered to buy certain supplies of opium in order to make and maintain staunch allies among the growers cum guerrillas.

Large-scale traffickers such as the Kuomintang were supported in some cases, only tolerated in others, so long as they displayed anti-communist attitudes and rendered intelligence services.

They were even given the use of CIA planes.

Even when the Kuomintang hit upon the scheme of processing its own opium to increase profits, U.S. officials did nothing although the CIA could not have failed to notice refineries in the area of the "fertile triangle," refineries which turned out 96 per cent pure heroin.

Last year, as mentioned, because of the pressures from President Nixon to crack down on heroin wherever in the world it would be possible, some action was taken in Southeast Asia.

Dealers Bought Off

The CIA and other agencies bought off certain dealers (including a general who was paid to retire), who had been their friends and who were deeply involved in opium. A few raids were conducted in Thailand.

A deal was made in which certain refineries in Laos were closed.

But the point is that the installations moved to Burma and there, together with an adjacent area of Thailand, the highest concentration of refineries in the world is now situated. Marseilles cannot compare.

Thus, the richest traffic and cultivation of opium in the world goes on.

Not in the Mideast, formerly the biggest supplier, whose annual output has dropped to 120 tons and will decrease further.

But in the Far East, and more specifically in Southeast Asia's fertile triangle, where U.S. encouragement, war and muddying of borders by rampaging troops make the business easy.

It could be stopped and should be, but only the most determind co-operation among nations would do the job, co-operation at economic, political, military and social levels. Such co-operation seems unlikely.

A Routine Day In Junk City

By SHANE STEVENS
From New York

The girl in my building is running scared.

She had a six-inch knife jammed against her throat in the hallway downstairs.

Knocked to the ground from behind, she fell against the stairs. The knife was on her before she could react.

"Don't move, don't scream, don't talk."

"We're not going to hurt you, bitch. We just want your money."

The youth gave a short hysterical laugh.

Diane felt the blade bite into her throat. She closed her eyes and imagined warm rivulets of blood oozing down. She knew she was to die. die.

Her shoulder bag was opened, the wallet taken out. Slender female fingers rifled through it. "Ten, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, eighteen. That's it." She counted it again, silently.

"Is that all you got?" The boy's voice cracked nervously. "Is that all?"

Diane tried to say yes, but couldn't.

Nor could she move her head. Water slowly came to her eyes and she found she couldn't control it.

The bag was explored further. Cards, address book, maybe a dollar in change, some subway tokens. These were scooped up along with the change.

"What's this?"

The girl held up a small Jewish star set on a thin gold chain. She quickly looked it over then stuffed it in her jacket pocket.

Turning the bag over she dumped its contents on the tile floor and rummaged around, picking out some further change and two packs of cigarettes.

"The rings, get the rings."

Grabbing Diane's hand, the girl forced a large antique ring off her index finger. Moving behind the boy to the other hand, she tried to work off a gold ring that looked expensive.

"Don't call it narcotics or drugs, don't pretty it up. Call it junk. That's what it is."

"Gimme it. I'll chop it off right here." Diane, terrified, cried out. "No, please. I'll get it off. Please." The girl stayed her partner's knife arm. "Let her do it."

His eyes feverishly followed the ring finger as Diane tried desperately to twist it off. She wet the finger several times in her mouth, until finally it loosened and came free. He grabbed it out of her hand.

"C'mon."

The girl knelt by Diane. "Don't come out after us," she hissed, "or we be back for you. I mean it."

The boy was already opening the front door.

"C'mon."

It was a clear crisp day, a fine day in New York City, as the two young junkies walked out of the building on East Ninth Street, in the heart of the East Village.

For Diane, it was also very lucky day. She survived.

High federal officials are now calling drug addiction the United States' number one social problem, and demanding an all-out "total war" against drugs.

For New York City this is an old problem, at least 10 years old — and in the junk business that's a lifetime.

Official police estimates indicate that more than half of all crimes committed in the city — more than half — are related to junk.

Don't call it narcotics or drugs, don't pretty it up. Call it junk. That's what it is. It's junk deaths, junk lives, junk business, Junk City.

Statistics on junk in New York? A bushelful. On an average of four people dead — every day. More than $3 million in property stolen — every day. Over 100 people arrested — every day.

Junk is the largest single cause of death for those between 15 and 35 years of age.

The value of property and cash stolen by junkies is more than $1 billion yearly. And this is only what's reported. Unreported amounts could probably double that figure.

At least 150,000 junkies live in the city. Some 32,000 of them are on welfare at a cost of $70 million a year to support. And the city's Addiction Services Agency spends $100 million a year.

Contrary to popular fiction, the number of junkies is rising. In 1971, for example, 1,259 persons died of junk-related causes, more than in any previous year. And the number of junkies on welfare is rising.

Beyond all the statistics is the fact that the junky toll of injury, abuse, destruction and demoralization is incalculable and disproportionate to their number.

As with Diane.

Last night Diane returned home from work and found her apartment had been broken into. Through a small window in the rear with bars across it.

Only a very thin supple body could squeeze between those bars. Only someone absolutely desperate for money would want to.

They got away with $150 worth of saleable items. Junkies sell the stuff for one-fifth its value, so a junkie with a good habit would need to make three such scores a day. Every day of his life. And of yours.

Profits Trebled

In the last five years, the Kuomintang, discovering among other things that some of the opium it was transporting was bringing in 2,500 times more profit to the ultimate dealer than to its troops, began processing the opium itself.

Kuomintang thereby increased its own profits, never inconsiderable, at least threefold.

In Thailand at least, the government once had a monopoly on opium. That is no longer true. Poppy-growing, trading and using are illegal.

But Thai officials have a mixed set of attitudes toward the hill people and the production of opium today, the sum of which is that it goes on unchecked.

So if the government leaves the growers alone, the growers will not complain about the lowland majorities whom they dislike; they will instead accept the political status quo and the life in the poppy fields, to which they are accustomed. They will not fuss over prices at harvest time.

Growers Buy Arms

But the growers do accumulate some surplus cash, as Bangkok knows too well, and with it they tend to amass arms.

The growers make it plain that if there is any attempt to suppress or hinder opium production they will become guerrillas.

That is what happened in Laos: the Meo rebellion began not as a planned "communist revolt," but out of bitterness and misunderstanding that arose when Laotian officials tried to step into the opium trade.

Under pressure from the United States and other outsiders, the governments do of course pretend to be attempting to eliminate the trade.

But because of internal difficulties with roaming armies and guerrillas, and with corruption of their own officials, they have largely kept hands off.

Until last year, no serious attempt of any kind was made by any of the three governments we have talked about here to curb the traffic, to stop it where it must be stopped — in the hills.

$85 Million Is at Stake

At least $85 million is at stake, and no single government has seemed willing to do other than to participate.

The governments in question knew in any case that United States objections were in the main window-dressing.

The truth was that the U.S. spreading involvement in the war meant that its chief concern was stability in Southeast Asia.

Blue Collar Talks Resume in Stink

Flood New Montreal Foe

MONTREAL (UPI) — Negotiations between the city and its 8,000 striking blue collar workers resumed Thursday, as the morning's rush-hour traffic was thrown into confusion by flooding throughout the city.

The flooding was the result of heavy rain and uncollected garbage which blocked sewers. Water flowed over sidewalks and accumulated in underpasses. The fire department was kept busy pumping out flooded basements.

Talks between the city and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 301, got underway at 10 a.m., the first negotiations since the beginning of the strike 21 days ago.

Wednesday, health inspectors urged the city to begin spraying the reeking heaps of garbage which have accumulated along streets and in parks being used as emergency public dumps with non-toxic insecticides as the first step in an effort to avoid outbreaks of disease.

Later Wednesday night, six men were arrested by police in the city's northeast end when 12 employees of a private garbage collection firm were attacked with clubs.

Police said about 150 persons were involved in the attack and that several thousand dollars worth of damage was caused to garbage trucks in the violence which followed.

The meetings continued during the afternoon but there was no word as to the nature of specific proposals being studied.

Money issues in the blue collar workers' dispute with the city were resolved long before their strike began. The talks then focused on job security clauses.

The blue collar workers sought increased job security due to the possibility of their being transferred eventually to the Montreal Urban Community, which already has ultimate responsibility over public transport and a number of other services in the city and suburbs located on the Island of Montreal.

The civic employees have also demanded the city stop using private contractors for garbage collection.

As talks resumed Thursday, there was no indication either side was prepared to compromise.

North Vietnam, Chile Linked

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Chile's Marxist-led government established diplomatic relations Thursday with North Vietnam and North Korea, becoming the second country in the Western Hemisphere to recognize the Communist Hanoi and Pyongyang regimes.

Professor Cites Drugs Pressure:

Peers Affect Users

By GLENNIS ZILM

OTTAWA (CP) — Young persons considering trying drugs such as marijuana or LSD are probably more influenced by pressure from their peers than what they see on television or read in newspapers, says a member of a federal commission studying non-medical use of drugs.

"It is really the peer group which shapes and pressures teenagers to certain actions," Prof. Marie-Andree Bertrand told the opening session of a 10-day seminar sponsored by the Addiction Research Foundation.

She said the general belief that newspapers and broadcast media shape attitudes toward drug use does not agree with research carried out by the five-member commission and its staff.

She made the comments in a videotaped interview. She had been scheduled to speak to the group, but Wednesday her doctor refused to allow her to travel from her Montreal home because of a severe attack of flu.

Mrs. Bertrand, who teaches criminology at the University of Montreal, also said the majority of drug users show no medical differences from non-users, unless they are extremely heavy users.

Other studies by the commission, which will be released in its final report this summer, she said, showed there were no indications that drug users had background problems that were any different from non-users.

It could not be shown that users of alcohol, cannabis or hallucinogens such as LSD, had any more or less of these problems than non-users.

Some other researchers have tried to show a relationship between boredom and education methods that fail to hold students' attention and increased drug use, she said. However, that does not necessarily hold true.

She said, however, for some heavy users indicate that something is radically wrong in his environment — they may be a signal that the person is running away from the problem and wants help.

"We all escape some way — but the heavy user may be trying to say something." She said he may not know how to ask for help any other way.

Study Will Use Sun's Eclipse

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canadian scientists will use a full eclipse of the sun July 10 to measure ionization in the upper atmosphere during complete occultation of the sun by the moon. The National Research Council said the measurements will be made using eight Black Brant missiles launched in Nova Scotia and at the research missile launching base at Churchill, Man.

Prosecution Summatio

Angela's Gigantic H

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Hearing of the Angela Davis murder-kidnapping case ended Thursday after the defence called the charges a "gigantic hoax" and pleaded with the all-white jury to find her innocent.

After nearly 14 weeks of testimony and legal manoeuvring, superior Court Judge Richard Arnason will deliver his instructions today to the jury of seven women and five men who then will begin deliberations.

In his summation, defence attorney Leo Branton said the circumstantial case built by the prosecution was "rub-bish," "p cenity."

Hospitals Contract First Ever

VANCOUVER (CP) — The executive of the Health Sciences Association, representing approximately 1,300 paramedical personnel in 37 B.C. hospitals, Wednesday agreed to terms of a first-ever contract with the B.C. Hospitals Association.

Members of the Association, which has promised never to go on strike, will vote on terms of the agreement over the next few days. Details will not be released until after the vote is completed.

The association gained certification as bargaining agent for auxiliary employees last fall despite objections by the Hospital Employees Union which represents 8,500 other hospital workers in B.C.

The new group represents pharmacists, dieticians, x-ray technicians, medical social workers, laboratory technologists, remedial gymnasts, medical records librarians, occupational therapists and physiotherapists.

Prosecution Summation:

Angela's Trial Gigantic Hoax

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Hearing of the Angela Davis murder-kidnapping case ended Thursday after the defence called the charges a "gigantic hoax" and pleaded with the all-white jury to find her innocent.

After nearly 14 weeks of testimony and legal manoeuvring, superior Court Judge Richard Arnason will deliver his instructions today to the jury of seven women and five men who then will begin deliberations.

In his summation, defence attorney Leo Branton said the circumstantial case built by the prosecution was "rubbish," "puerile" and "an obscenity."

He said Miss Davis was trapped in a web of coincidence, that she was the victim of mistaken identity, and that she fled following the Marin County courthouse shootings because she was afraid for her life.

In his rebuttal, prosecutor Albert Harris, Jr. said either Angela Davis knew what Jonathan Jackson was going to do with the guns, book and rented van, or he attempted to implicate her in the crime "for reasons I think beyond human comprehension."

"Unless you believe she knew of the venture you have to believe Jonathan Jackson was trying to implicate the one person in the world who probably shared his devotion to his brother George," Harris said.

"He was abandoning his brother and betraying his closest friend. This explanation is so incredible and unbelievable that we think you have no choice but to conclude that Angela Davis did know of this conspiracy and did promote it."

Miss Davis, a black militant and an avowed Communist, vanished Aug. 7, 1970, when four persons were killed in a gunbattle at the Marin Civic Centre. She was arrested in New York Oct. 13, 1970, and charged with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy.

Branton said he was sure the jury would agree with him on one thing — "that Angela Davis is no fool."

He said that to believe the prosecution's theory of the case, "you would have to think she was a fool."

Hospitals Contract First Ever

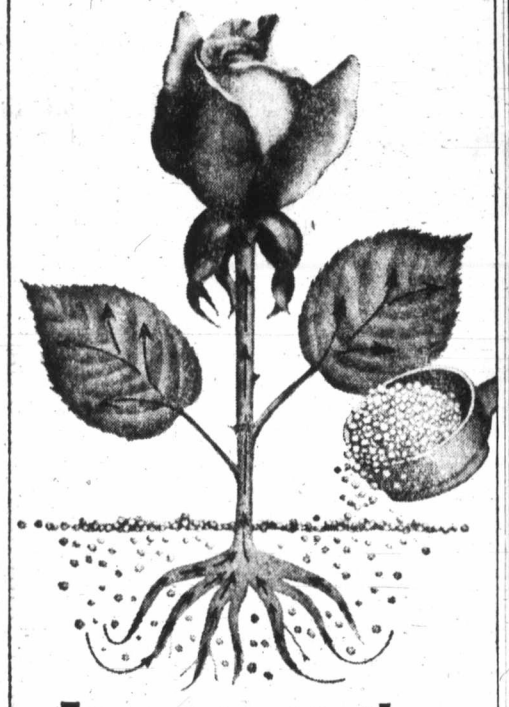

VANCOUVER (CP) — The executive of the Health Sciences Association, representing approximately 1,300 paramedical personnel in 37 B.C. hospitals, Wednesday agreed to terms of a first-ever contract with the B.C. Hospitals Association.

Members of the Association, which has promised never to go on strike, will vote on terms of the agreement over the next few days. Details will not be released until after the vote is completed.

The association gained certification as bargaining agent for auxiliary employees last fall despite objections by the Hospital Employees Union which represents 8,500 other hospital workers in B.C.

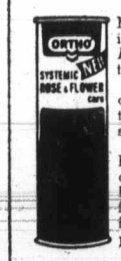

The new group represents pharmacists, dieticians, x-ray technicians, medical social workers, laboratory technologists, remedial gymnasts, medical records librarians, occupational therapists and physiotherapists.

Insect protection that works inside your flowers.

Might sound incredible. But it's absolutely true. Both insecticide and fertilizer from Ortho's new Systemic Rose and Flower Care are absorbed up through the roots and into the sap stream.

So they protect and feed your flowers for as long as six weeks. (Because working inside the plant, their effectiveness cannot be wasted away by sprinkling or rain.)

Result: roses and other flowers are fertilized one hundred percent. And sucking insects (aphids, mites and so on) that come to feed, die. That's it. Ortho Rose and Flower Care. Full fertilization and protection for six weeks or more for pennies a plant. Amazing.

Nobel Winner: Anesthesia Acupuncture 'Real'

It All Relates to Fibres

By HARRY NELSON
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

PASADENA, Calif. — The mysteries of Chinese acupuncture are gradually being explained in a scientific way, a Nobel Prize-winning American said here.

Recently-returned from a trip to China where he visited basic research laboratories, Dr. George Wald said he is convinced the so-called anesthesia acupuncture is "absolutely real" and not suggestion or hypnotism as suspected by some foreigners.

Wald, a biology professor at Harvard, said his remarks apply only to the recently-developed technique of alleviating pain during surgery and not to the traditional acupuncture of inserting needles in certain key body locations to treat diseases.

The latter, he said, is a branch of folk medicine and "probably has no scientific grounds."

While the anesthesia acupuncture also uses needles, the needles are continuously twirled by hand instead of being left quietly in place as in the case of acupuncture therapy.

The effect, Wald said, is not to produce true anesthesia, which is total loss of sensation, but analgesia, which is specifically loss of pain sensation.

"The only sensation eliminated is pain," he said. "Patients have all the other skin sensations. They feel heat, cold, touch and pressure but not pain."

Wald shared a Nobel Prize in 1967 for work on the primary chemical and physiological processes responsible for vision.

The neurophysiological explanation for acupuncture has to do with the fact that pain has special characteristics not shared by the other four skin sensations. It is this special way the body has of handling pain which makes acupuncture feasible, he said.

Basic research done principally at the physiological institute of the academy of sciences in Shanghai by Prof. Chang has shown that continuously twirling the needles has a peculiar inhibiting effect on pain-carrying nerve fibres.

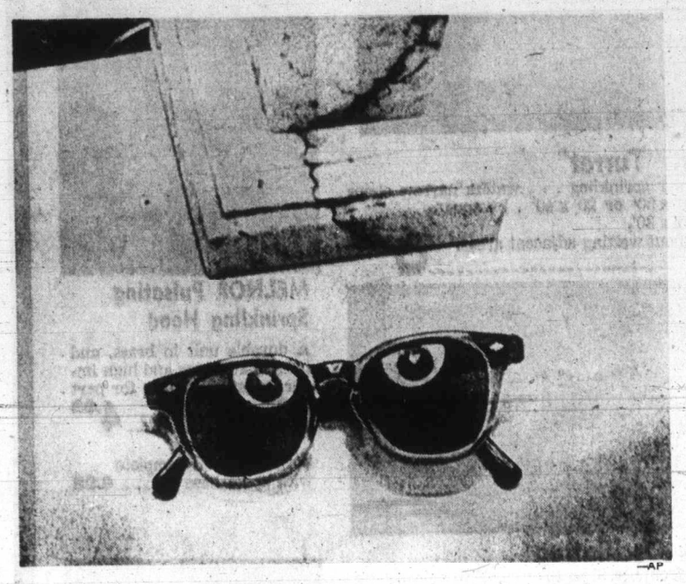

Nerve fibres come in three sizes — small, medium and large. Fibres that carry pain sensation are among the smallest in the body.

Needles inserted to kill pain actually stimulate the larger nerve fibres, and the resulting activity of the larger fibres suppresses the activity of the small pain-carrying fibres, Wald said.

This inhibition of activity of the small fibres occurs in the spinal cord — not at the spot where the needle is located. This finding, which Wald said the Chinese have learned by taking electrical readings on animals receiving acupuncture, helps explain the sometimes bizarre locations at which needles are placed.

For example, to kill pain in the jaw region a needle will be placed at a point between the thumb and first finger. The reason, Wald said, is that the nerve fibres stimulated in the hand lead into the spinal cord at the same spot that pain-carrying fibres from the jaw join the cord.

The reason the Chinese sometimes introduce electricity into the needle, the biologist said, is to save themselves the energy of having to twirl the needles by hand, especially when many needles are being used.

Council Makes Pesticide Plea

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Environmental Council Thursday urged the provincial agriculture department to reconsider its decision to discontinue collecting unwanted pesticides for disposal.

The council said in a statement it is "deeply concerned" because it believes unwanted pesticides now will end up in municipal garbage dumps or sewer systems.

The agriculture department Wednesday stopped collecting unwanted pesticides because the volume brought in for disposal had diminished to a "trickle."

SAIGON (UPI) — An armored column of 2,000 South Vietnamese moved forward northwest of Hue Thursday in an attack that met immediate resistance from long-range communist artillery batteries set up in occupied Quang Tri province.

Field reports said a 50-round barrage of 130-millimetre artillery fire hit the column shortly after it started out, killing at least six soldiers and wounding many others. The column continued to press forward toward its objective, a North Vietnamese stronghold of an estimated 600 men in the hills southwest of My Chanh 20 miles northwest of Hue.

Low clouds and heavy rain prevented U.S. fighter-bombers from providing close support to the column, but air force B-52 Stratofortresses flying above the weather made 17 missions around Hue, the old imperial capital on the northern coast, and also flew missions around Kontum in the central highlands and at An Loc north of Saigon. All three towns are threatened by communist takeover, and there was fighting Thursday inside An Loc and Kontum.

The bad flying weather extended over most of North Vietnam Thursday as well, but military sources said air raids continued over the North with planes locating their targets by the use of radar.

In raids Wednesday, the U.S. command said, two of four North Vietnamese MiG sent to intercept U.S. planes were shot down near Hanoi. One U.S. Air Force F-4 Phantom was also shot up, but its two-man crew coaxed the crippled craft back to Thailand before bailing out and letting it crash 12 miles from the Royal Thai airbase at Udon Thani. A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Bangkok said both crewmen were immediately rescued.

Inmates Riot In Italy

NAPLES (AP) — Half the 2,000 prisoners at Naples' big Poggioreale jail broke out of their cells, streamed into the courtyard and rioted for six hours Thursday night. A thousand police and troops drove them from the yard.

Guards opened fire to prevent escapes, and police used tear gas. Three convicts were in hospital with gunshot wounds.

The revolt began at 10 p.m. Wednesday after a tense day in which convicts protested against overcrowding, unsanitary conditions and poor meals.

Prison authorities told a delegation of protesting prisoners Wednesday that transfers would be made to relieve congestion, with the first group of 150 to be moved Thursday.

Cantaloupe Workers Walk Out

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — The leader of a United Farm Workers strike here said 1,500 cantaloupe workers refused to work Thursday and the walkout should spread to vast citrus orchards along the Colorado River by the weekend.

Meanwhile, a source close to Cesar Chavez said the UFW leader has indicated he wants to end his fast after 31 days.

Chavez was reported in fair condition after entering a Phoenix hospital Wednesday during his 20th day without food.

Manuel Chavez, leader of the Yuma strike and cousin of the UFW leader, said the cantaloupe workers refused to board buses to go to the fields Thursday. Most of them, he said, were green recruits from Mexico.

Manuel Chavez also said 500 laborers were manning picket lines in the Dome Valley area and he is mapping out plans to spread the strike statewide within a week.

Heavy Northern Barrage Near Hue

Southern Armor Moves On

SAIGON (UPI) — An armored column of 2,000 South Vietnamese moved forward northwest of Hue Thursday in an attack that met immediate resistance from long-range communist artillery batteries set up in occupied Quang Tri province.

Field reports said a 50-round barrage of 130-millimetre artillery fire hit the column shortly after it started out, killing at least six soldiers and wounding many others. A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Bangkok said both crewmen were immediately rescued.

The four Soviet-built MiG-21 fighters rose from Kep, the major North Vietnamese fighter base 30 miles northeast of Hanoi, to challenge raiding air force, navy and marine corps Phantoms Wednesday, the command said.

The command said air strikes over the North Wednesday destroyed two bridges and a causeway near Quang Khe, 60 miles north of the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam. Quang Khe is one of the country's seven ports that has been mined as part of the U.S. blockade. The command did not announce the results of any air strikes in the Hanoi area Wednesday, reporting only that the two MiGs were shot down there.

In Kontum, UPI correspondent Matt Franjola said North Vietnamese and South Vietnamese troops were fighting from house to house Thursday in three sections of the provincial capital 260 miles north of Saigon.

Brig.-Gen. Ly Tong Ba, the South Vietnamese commander in Kontum, told Franjola the North Vietnamese apparently faked a surrender of 100 troops Tuesday in order to move reinforcements into the northern part of Kontum.

School Aid Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba has called for the formation of a special legislature committee to study the question of public aid to private and parochial schools.

A private member's resolution, sponsored by Schreyer, would give such a committee permission to sit during the current session and after prorogation.

The committee would report to the next session on the school aid question, which has troubled Manitoba since the late 1880s. The 50-odd private and parochial schools in the province now are without direct tax aid.

The schools are allowed to share certain facilities of the public school system.

Schreyer's proposal for dealing with the contentious issue was contained in Thursday's votes and proceedings, the legislature's official publication.

The New Democratic Party's annual meeting last fall tussled with the question and gave the premier a convention mandate to settle the matter through a free vote in the legislature.

Every so often, Mercedes-Benz introduces a bit of automotive history.

The new Mercedes-Benz 350SL re-introduces the concept of the grand touring car. And it's already "one of the ten best cars in the world," according to Road & Track.

CAR & DRIVER MAGAZINE says "A grand touring car is intended to transport one or two people over long distances with a maximum of comfort in a minimum of time."

The Mercedes-Benz 350SL has all the requisite credentials.

An over-head camshaft, electronically fuel-injected V-8 that displaces 4.5 liters and redlines at 5,800 rpm's. A new three-speed automatic transmission of the torque converter type. Power-assisted disc brakes on all four wheels, ventilated in front.

In total, the 350SL offers a balance between ride and handling that is unique to Mercedes-Benz.

A promise fulfilled

Inside, the 350SL fulfills its promise as a grand touring car. Individual seats for driver and passenger are built in the well-known Mercedes-Benz tradition.

Designed by orthopedic surgeons, the contours and construction of the seats provide the kind of support that permits hour after hour of touring.

Air conditioning is standard equipment. As a final flourish, the glove box is lighted by a removable, rechargeable flashlight.

Other innovations

Its body is new, not just in the styling sense, but in fundamental ways.

For instance, special channels in the windshield pillars guide spray over the roof, keeping side windows clear. And doors have become part of the heating/air conditioning system, with built-in duct work that helps keep windows defogged.

A modest extravagance

A $13,720* two-seater can hardly be considered cheap transportation. But when compared to the exotica it rivals, it could be considered a modest extravagance.

The fact that it comes with a removable coupe roof and soft roadster top will let you view it as two cars for the price of one. And if you need further justification, you can turn to Road & Track's "Ten Best Cars" article from which we quote:

"The new Mercedes-Benz 350SL . . . is a 'personal' car, an everyday transportation car of the highest order. One that you can live with year in, year out, as the traditional thoroughness of M-B design and construction make themselves known over the long haul."

If you would like to arrange a test drive, please contact us at the address below, or one of our dealers. Afterwards, we believe you'll want to make this the year you will finally own a Mercedes-Benz.

"This is the year I will finally own a Mercedes-Benz."

*Price shown is suggested retail exclusive of some options, F.O.B. Toronto. Provincial taxes extra. For more information see your local dealer or write to: Mercedes-Benz of Canada Ltd., 849 Eglinton Avenue East, Toronto 17, Ontario. And enquire about our European Delivery Plan.

Oils Lead Way In Recovery

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market overcame losses suffered early in the session Thursday to close fractionally higher in moderate trading.

Western oils moved sharply higher late in the session following an announcement that Panarctic Oil had made additional gas discoveries on Melville Island in the Canadian Arctic.

Among oil issues, Aquitaine was up ¼ to $22½, Bow Valley ¾ to $32, Dome Pete ¾ to $40, Scurry-Rainbow ⅛ to $16¼ and Pacific Pete ¼ to 14⅝.

Back, Forth

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices drifted marginally back and forth in moderate trading.

Analysts said many investors had taken to the sidelines waiting to hear what President Nixon said in his Thursday night TV address on his trip to the Soviet Union.

Light Day

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices in all sectors except papers snapped-out of a recent losing streak in light trading.

Fleetwood Corp. gained 5 to $20, Ronalds-Federated 1¼ to $19¼; Rio Algom 1 to $20½, Rapid Data ⅞ to $20½, Premier Cablevision ¾ to 20¾.

Afton Back

VANCOUVER — Prices were higher in moderate trading. Afton Mines, which had plummeted sharply Wednesday after Teck had finished buying controlling interest in the Kamloops copper attraction, recovered ⅛ to 11¼ on a turnover of 37,800 shares.

Arctic Gas

Pipe Survey Starts

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government has given the go-ahead for an aerial survey this summer of two potential natural gas pipeline routes from the Arctic directly to eastern Canada.

Jean Chretien, minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, told a news conference Thursday the decision was taken after sufficient natural gas reserves were discovered in the Arctic by Panarctic Oils Ltd.

The federal government has a 45-per-cent interest in Panarctic, with the remaining 55 per cent being controlled by 19 companies, including subsidiaries of Canadian Pacific Ltd.

Chretien also confirmed that additional natural gas has been "encountered by Panarctic Oils Ltd. on the Drake Point structure in northeast Melville Island" in the Arctic.

The news conference was held after Panarctic's annual meeting of shareholders, which was closed to the news media. It was the first time the Calgary-based company held its meeting in Montreal.

Chretien said one proposed route would take the pipeline from Resolute on Cornwallis Island about 2,100 miles to Montreal along the eastern coast of Hudson Bay.

The other route would begin at the same point but would run on the western side of Hudson Bay through the Northwest Territories, Manitoba and Ontario — with Hamilton being the destination.

Panarctic president Charles Hetherington said the market for natural gas is big enough to require two pipelines, one going from the Arctic to Montreal or Hamilton and the other along the Mackenzie Delta through western Canada.

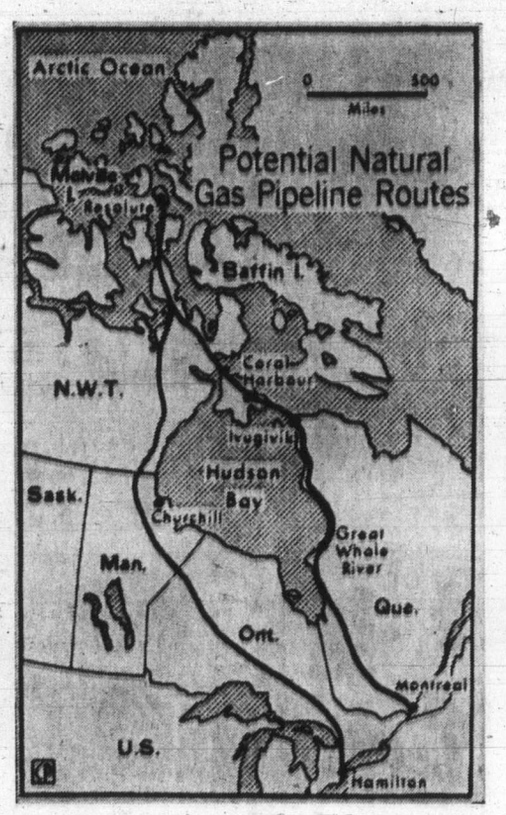

Heatherington said Panarctic now has about one-third of the required natural gas reserves in the Arctic to justify a pipeline to eastern Canada.

He said much of the gas, "more than 50 per cent," would be destined for the markets of the eastern United States but that the amount exported would be controlled by the National Energy Board.

The cost of the aerial survey this year would amount to about $500,000, said Hetherington. So far Panarctic has spent about $76 million, with the federal government's share totalling $34 million.

Hetherington said he could not estimate the cost of the proposed pipeline from the Arctic to eastern Canada, but thought it would be less than the $10-billion pipeline proposed for western Canada.

Chretien figured a firm decision on the start of the proposed line from Cornwallis to eastern Canada would not be made for at least five years.

Two possible routes

Before Thursday's confirmation of the discovery of additional natural gas on Drake Island, the company had made three major gas discoveries.

They are at Drake Point on the Sabine Peninsula off Melville Island, on King Christian Island and at Kristoffer Bay on Ellef Ringnes Island.

Gas showings along with recoveries of oil were recently encountered at Thor Island about 50 miles north of King Christian and at Romulus Lake on the Fosheim Peninsula of Ellesmere Island.

Syria, Iraq Take Over Oil Company

DAMASCUS (UPI) — Syria Thursday night joined Iraq in nationalizing all assets of the Iraq Petroleum Co., Ltd., (IPC), which is owned by a consortium of western firms including Standard Oil of New Jersey and the Mobil Oil Co.

The official Syrian news agency said Syria's nationalization involves a pipeline that annually handles 57 million tons of crude oil from Iraqi fields, across Syria and Lebanon and to the Mediterranean Sea.

Lebanon has not made an announcement on the section of pipeline which runs through its territory.

The Syrian announcement came several hours after Iraqi President Ahmed Hassad Al Bakr in Bagdad announced his government had nationalized IPC operations there.

The takeover of the firm and all its properties followed a breakdown in negotiations on government demands that IPC increase production and the company's insistence on compensation for the expropriation of almost all its oilfield concession 11 years ago.

The IPC is owned by British Petroleum, Royal Dutch Shell and the Compagnie Francaise des Petroles, each of which has a 23.75 per cent interest, and Standard Oil (N.J.) and the Mobil Oil Co., each of which has 11.875 per cent interest. The Partex Co., a private firm, holds the other 5 per cent.

Intervention Admitted

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner, asked whether the Canadian dollar is still floating freely, told the Commons Thursday that the government is "intervening in the exchange fund only to maintain an orderly market."

His comment followed published reports that the Bank of Canada has been buying United States dollars and selling Canadian dollars to prevent the value of the Canadian dollar from moving farther above its U.S. counterpart.

Treasury Bills

OTTAWA (CP)—New 91 day Government of Canada treasury bills auctioned Thursday: $190 million at an average price and yield of 99.079 and 3.73 per cent. Last week, same amount and term, 99.078 and 3.73 per cent. 182-day: $35 million at 97.995 and 4.10 per cent. Last week, same amount and term, 97.978 and 4.14 per cent.

Control of Afton Bought by Teck

VANCOUVER (CP) — Control of Afton Mines Ltd. was acquired Wednesday by Teck Corp. Ltd., a Toronto-based mining company with large exploration interests in B.C.

Norman Keevil Executive vice-president of Teck, said his company and an affiliate had bought more than 50 per cent of Afton's outstanding 2,624,020 shares on the market, paying from $10 to $15.50 a share for a cost of about $16 million.

Afton, exploring a copper prospect 10 miles southwest of Kamloops, has been the centre of the hottest speculative market in the history of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Afton Shares closed Wednesday on the VSE at $11⅛, after hitting a record high of $15.50. In 1971, Afton had a low of 10 cents and a high of $1.67.

Placer Development Ltd. of Vancouver acquired 100,000 shares of Afton in March and was given first right of refusal to participate in future financing of Afton. Teck says its acquisition of 50.1 per cent interest in Afton will not affect this.

Javelin Speaks

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian Javelin Ltd. of Montreal has charged that the former Smallwood government in Newfoundland failed to live up to the terms of an agreement for construction of a linerboard mill at Stephenville, Nfld.

Breaking a self-imposed silence, the company said in a news release that the former Liberal government "seriously obstructed" Javelin's efforts to complete the project.

The company said it refrained from commenting about the hot political issue in Newfoundland while the provincial government was negotiating to take over the Stephenville mill.

The new Conservative government reached an agreement with Javelin to take over the linerboard mill effective May 25. The agreement was approved by the Newfoundland legislature May 5.

Anacortes Run Boosts Trips

There'll be changes in the Washington State Ferry schedule linking Sidney, the San Juan Islands and Anacortes beginning June 11 — but there will be no reduction, a spokesman for the ferries said Thursday.

In fact, San Juan islanders will be able to spend a longer period on Vancouver Island during a one-day visit.

Starting June 11, two ferries will leave Sidney daily, at 10 a.m. and at 6 p.m. The first will run non-stop to Anacortes, arriving there at 12:30 p.m.

The second will make the island stops — Friday Harbor at 7:30 p.m., Orcas at 8 p.m., Lopez at 8:15 p.m. — reaching Anacortes at 9 p.m.

First daily ferry out of Anacortes will leave at 7 a.m., stopping at Lopez at 7:40 a.m. and Orcas at 8 a.m., reaching Sidney at 9:45 a.m. The later boat will leave Anacortes at 3:15 p.m. for a non-stop run reaching Sidney at 5:45 p.m.

The familiar big vessel Evergreen State will make the Sidney-Anacortes runs again this summer, but next year it is expected a much bigger craft will be operating.

Other ferries in the line will be running only between the San Juan islands and Anacortes, and through connections between these and the Evergreen State will be able to visit Vancouver Island any day from 9:45 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Fares for the journey between Sidney and Anacortes will be $7 for cars, $2.50 each way for adults, $1.25 for children aged 5 to 12.

There will be a $4.50 round-trip excursion fare, with a two-and-a-half hour layover in Anacortes before making the return trip. In that interval the boat will be making a short inter-island run.

Hospital Plan's Cox Retiring

Cox, 2554 Nottingham, Oak Bay, has been with the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service since 1950, when he was named assistant commissioner in charge of hospital services and chief inspector of hospitals.

He was appointed commissioner and chief inspector of hospitals in 1954. In 1959 this title was changed to Deputy Minister of Hospital Insurance and chief inspector of hospitals.

Cox was an active participant in the federal-provincial conferences which led to the development of the hospital insurance program, and in 1956 was made a member of the federal-provincial advisory committee on hospital insurance and diagnostic services.

Before coming to B.C. Cox had worked for 18 years with Winnipeg municipal hospitals.

He was also active in the Manitoba Hospital Association, becoming an honorary life member, and was the association's vice-president before coming to B.C.

Cox founded the Western Canada Institute for hospital administrators and trustees, and was chairman of the first institute in 1946. He also helped found the Upper Midwest Hospital Conference in 1948 and was elected its president in 1949.

He has been a member of the American College of Hospital Administrators since 1945, and was made a Fellow of the college in 1952.

He served as regent for B.C. on the college's Council of Regents from 1964 to 1967, and is a member of the American Hospital Association.

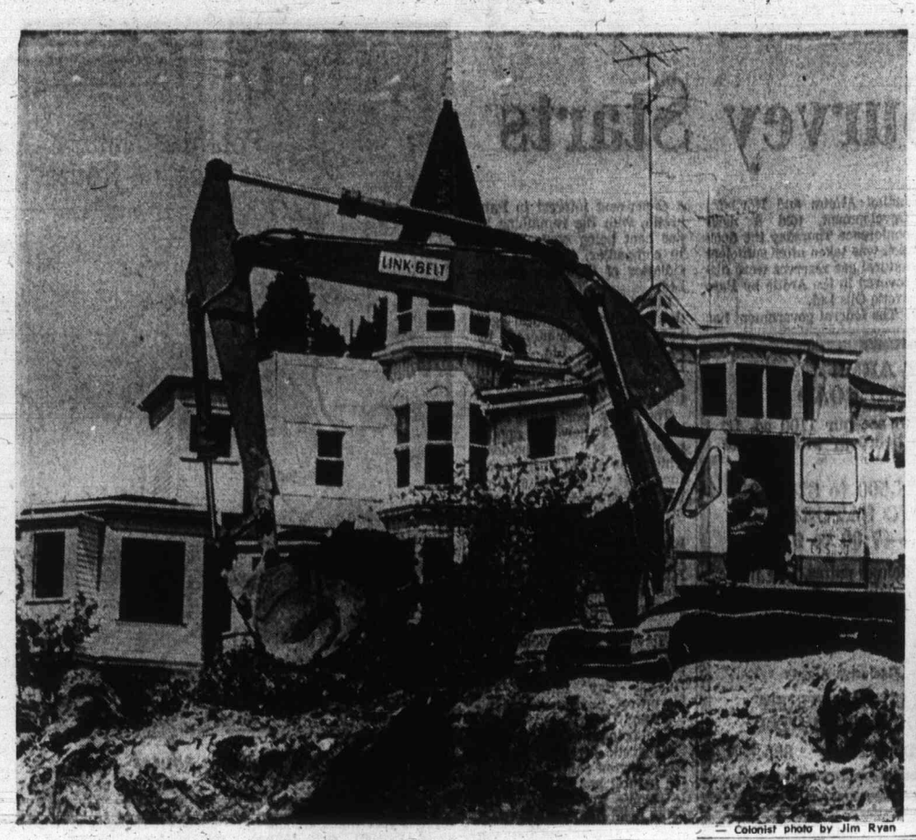

He has been a chairman of the Victoria chapter of the Chartered Institute of Secretaries of Joint Stock Companies and other Public Bodies and is a Fellow of the institute.

He is also a Fellow of the Institute of Commerce (England) and a member of the Institute of Public Administration of Canada and served as chairman of the Victoria branch.

After his retirement Cox will continue as a consultant with the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and his responsibilities will include directing the development of additional facilities for open heart surgery in Victoria and Vancouver.

Blacks Demand Bill of Rights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Thirteen Negro Democratic congressmen said Thursday if their party's 1972 platform does not contain a "black bill of rights" they would call for a black voting boycott to assure the re-election of President Nixon.

Landmark On Way Out

Old Victoria landmark will soon crumble under hammer of wrecking crew to make way for $4.5 million highrise complex. It was formerly owned by Victoria Wilson, who died in 1949 and left part of estate for care of her parrot Louis.

Veteran Comic Arquette Retires

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Comedian Cliff Arquette, better known on television as Charley Weaver, announced Thursday he will retire from almost 50 years in show business following recovery of a heart attack.

Arquette was stricken last April 24 and was taken to Queen of the Valley Hospital in nearby West Covina.

The long-time performer, who recently appeared on The Hollywood Squares television show, said he will make his home with his son's family in Skymont, Va., a community of the Subud Brotherhood, a non-sectarian spiritual group.

Logger Crushed To Death

Sooke logger Andrew Robert Anthony, 57, died instantly Thursday morning as he worked alone on a Butler Brothers logging operation in woods 22 miles northwest of Sooke.

RCMP at Sooke said Anthony, 3063 Sooke Road, had just cut two large logs in half when they rolled downhill and caught him between them. He died of head injuries and police said an inquiry would be held.

Savory Thoughts

Visions of flashing paddles and tortuous rapids went through mind of 10-year-old Michael Savory, 4009 Wiseton, Saanich, as he was shown proper method of paddling canoe Thursday night by Victoria Canoe Club member Wilf Harper. Demonstration to youngster was at club's special summer canoeing meeting at Tolmie elementary school in bid to curb canoeing accidents.

Bigger Family Slice: 1973

OTTAWA (CP) — Bigger family-allowance cheques probably will not start going out until the summer of 1973, more than a year late.

Officials of the federal health and welfare department disclosed the delay Thursday, as the government's complex and controversial family-income security plan was passed by the Commons health committee.

New Democrat House Leader Stanley Knowles reaffirmed his opposition to the bill's principle of selectivity. Unlike the present system, where all families with children under 18 get the allowances, the new plan would concentrate among lower-income families.

Knowles, MP for Winnipeg North Centre, issued a firm declaration of faith in the principle of universality and predicted that the selective system would not last three years before being abandoned.

When the government unveiled its new family-allowance plan last fall, Health Minister John Munro told the Commons he hoped to have it in effect by May this year.

U.S. War Funds Running Low

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The defence department is running out of money to pay for the naval blockade and air bombardment of North Vietnam and other military operations in Southeast Asia, a Pentagon spokesman said Thursday.

He said Defence Secretary Melvin Laird might raise the subject next week when he goes before U.S. Congress to discuss the arms limitation agreement, signed by President Nixon in Moscow, and the military situation in Vietnam.

The operational maintenance funds were running low, spokesman Jerry Friedheim told reporters, and Laird is prepared to discuss the matter when he appears before the appropriations and armed services committees in the Senate and House of Representatives.

He is expected to testify before the four committees Monday and Tuesday.

Irrigation Doesn't Improve The Breed

By JIM MURRAY

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — If you could see that far down the track, you may remember a colt named Kentuckian ran in the Kentucky Derby.

I say "ran" because he certainly didn't "race." The winner won in 2:01 4-5. I figure Kentuckian might have staggered in 2:08. He was a well-beaten 10th, 22 to 29 lengths away for most of the run.

Switch reels now to last Saturday at Hollywood Park. In a race the racing form described as featuring "the best of the Western generation," Kentuckian beat his company by a half-length in just a couple of ticks off the course record.

If you're a student of horse racing or of Rose Bowl games, it behooves you to wonder sometimes if Fred Allen wasn't right when he said "California's a great place — if you're an orange." The bulk of the evidence is, it's not such a great place if you're a horse, a fullback — and, maybe, not even if you're an orange anymore.

Horses who get shuffled back badly in Kentucky or New York or Maryland come back to Lotus Land and have clocks popping all over the backstretch again.

In the old movie Westerns, a favorite theme was to have an eastern greenhorn, a dude from Philadelphia or New York, come out and see where men were men and women were glad of it. It was a great part for Leslie Howard, but it was about as true to life as sleeping Beauty — or Black Beauty. You have to think Billy The Kid wouldn't have a notch on his gun if he stayed back in Brooklyn. He would have been mugged before he got it out of his holster.

We've been improving the breed out here for nearly 40 years now, and you still only need one hand to tote up the Calbreds who won the Kentucky Derby. In fact, even Kentucky-breds who feed for any length of time on California grass and California water seem to become equine hippies, or four-footed loafers.

A lot of chauvinistic Californians were disappointed when the three-year-old, Quack, was not nominated for the Kentucky Derby by trainer Charlie Whittingham. Quack had earned his ride by winning the California Derby at Bay Meadows. He beat Kentuckian by only two lengths. Kentuckian barely managed to beat a couple of field horses at Louisville.

I asked Whittingham in the saddling tunnel at Hollywood Park whether he regretted not having dropped Quack in the Kentucky Charlie, who has saddled only two horses at the Kentucky Derby, the well-beaten Gone Fishin' and Divine Comedy, scowled: "Are you kiddin'? You saw what they did to that other horse (Kentuckian)?! They shocked him. And he was right behind me at Bay Meadows. No, this horse stayed in the right place."

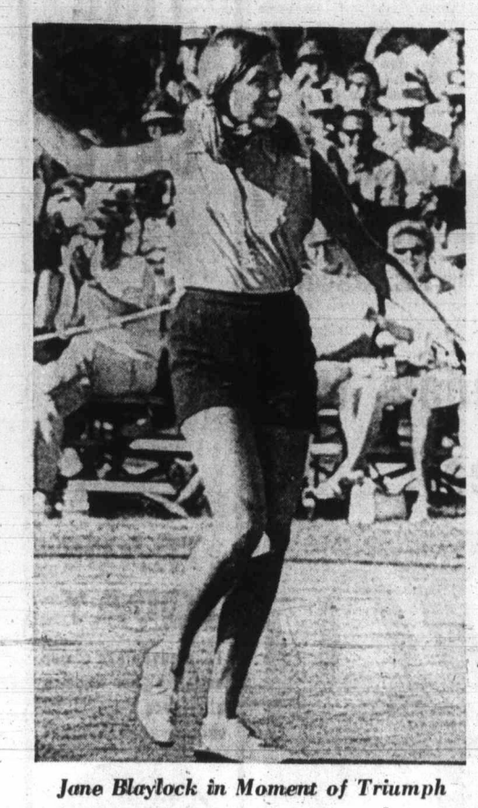

Competition is the name of the game. The story of Pee Wee Reese bears repeating. As the Dodgers planed into California for the first time to open the 1958 season at the infamous Chinese-wall Coliseum, Reese was greeted with the breathtaking news that collegians from Southern California had polled 11 homers in a single game the day before. Reese was unflustered. "Just tell me one thing," he said. "Who was pitching?"

California-campaigned horses who get roughed up by the big boys back East, then come back here and trounce their own kind, remind me of a guy who had a bad day at the office and comes home to kick the cat.

Why they go over the mountain in the first place is a mystery. Whittingham would flip a coin before he'd go back with Man O'War. But owners get dazzling visions. The criteria are all mixed up out here. A horse who can only get a good mile on a deep track against honest competition can win marathons out here because everything else in the race is just a graduate sprinter.

But when they ship for the Triple Crown with a triple clown, they remind you of a guy who's the best tennis player in Oyster Bay; so he files for Wimbledon. Or, he wins the boxing championship of the Military Academy; so he goes down to the waterfront to pick a fight. Or he beats Grandmere Whist, and he buys a stack of chips and goes looking for Nick The Greek. He's the pool champ of the dormitory; so he hunts up a high-stakes game with Minnesota Fats.

Our water comes from pipes, our grass is as artificial as a movie star's smile. We can grow a lot of things on irrigation — but not horses or halfbacks.

Jeevan Dillon scored four goals Thursday night to lead Victoria McDonald's Bread to an 8-6 win over Burnaby Cablevision in a Pacific Junior "A" Lacross League game at Memorial Arena.

The win, badly needed after McDonald's 12-10 upset defeat by J. Hawks in Coquitlam Wednesday night, boosted the Victoria team's lead over Burnaby and Richmond Roadrunners to three points. But the Richmond side has three games in hand and Burnaby has two in hand.

Three of Dillon's goals came in a one-minute 13-second burst in the first period and all four were scored on assists by Rob Alexander and Jim Lynch.

Alexander also got a goal and the other Victoria scorers were Andy Reid, Jerry Kutaski, making his first home appearance after returning from Europe, and Danny Green.

Burnaby's goals were shared between Dave Taylor, Gerry Wilson, Wayne Sutherland, Harban Siddoo, Mike McLenaghen and Gord McNeil.

Victoria led, 3-2, after the first period and 7-5 after two periods.

Old Rivals Meet Again

A lot of memories will be stirred when Geordie Johnston and Nanaimo's Fred Fulla line up at opposite ends of Memorial Arena on Saturday night. They were goal-keeping rivals in many an epic battle when Victoria Shamrocks and the Timbermen fought for Inter-City Lacrosse League supremacy, and they meet again in annual Oldtimers game between two clubs. Introductions are at 8 and veterans will start 60-minute game at 8:30. Preliminary game between minor league club starts at 7. Proceeds go to minor lacrosse.

Leading Golfer Suspended Files $5 Million Lawsuit

ATLANTA (CP) — Jane Blalock, leading money winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, filed a $5 million lawsuit against the LPGA in United States District Court here Thursday.

The suit, filed on her behalf by New York lawyers Lawrence Kill and Gerold Oshinsky, also asks the court to issue an order allowing her to compete in tournaments while the court case is being resolved.

E. M. Erickson, executive director of the association, had announced earlier in the day that the LPGA executive committee had suspended Miss Blalock for one year "for actions inconsistent with the code of ethics of the organization."

The suit seeks a jury trial and alleges violation of anti-trust laws, seeking damages of not less than $1 million, to be tripled as provided by law. It also seeks $1 million for compensatory damages and $1 million for punitive damages.

In Baltimore, where the $30,000 Lady Carling opens today, Cynthia Sullivan, president of the LPGA, said in a statement:

"The action was taken after Miss Blalock met with the executive board on three occasions within the last 10 days."

There were reports that Miss Blalock had been under surveillance for some time.

In the Bluegrass Invitational at Louisville, Ky., two weeks ago, she was suspended after the second round for mismarking her ball on the green and not penalizing herself.

The 26-year-old pro from Portsmouth, N.H., has won more than $30,000 on the tour this year while taking two tournament titles.

Court Condemns Crozier Rules Canucks Must Pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge Thursday described as "reprehensible" the conduct of Joe Crozier, former manager-coach of the Vancouver Canucks, and awarded player Herb Pinder $7,141 damages against the club for breach of contract.

Mr. Justice A. B. Macfarlane held that the club did not give written notice of termination as required by a contract signed by Pinder on Oct. 10, 1969, and thus did not end the contract in the manner stipulated in the contract.

Pinder claimed that when he signed the contract he asked that he be guaranteed $2,500 in the event he was dropped during the contract year. He was refused, but said he was told by Crozier that if he could not "cut it" by Christmas the club would pay him the total value of his contract.

Pinder, who had been a member of Canada's national hockey team, said he sought the "no cut" contract because he was attempting to pay his way through law school in Winnipeg and had given up a $5,000 scholarship to play for Canucks, at that time a member of the Western Hockey League.

Court was told Pinder attended training camp, played all exhibition games and three league games. Then, on Nov. 7, 1969, Crozier told him via telephone that his services were no longer required.

Pinder claimed that when he advised Crozier he intended to hold the club to his contract in view of events, Crozier said: "Listen, Sonny Jimbo, you made your mind up. You said you want your money. So I'm going to keep you in Vancouver all year and you're not going to play but you're going to be practising from eight in the morning until six at night."

Mr. Justice Macfarlane said that though Pinder then returned to Manitoba to play hockey, he could have been recalled by the Canucks at any time and was prepared to discuss the situation with the club.

"The matter was left unresolved by the defendant (the Vancouver Hockey Club) and not by the plaintiff (Pinder). The defendant could have properly terminated the contract but chose not to do so," he stated.

Mr. Justice Macfarlane said it was his opinion the conduct of Crozier was such that Pinder was entitled to assume the club did not intend to carry out the contract.

"Mr. Crozier did not assign the plaintiff to another team so he would have an opportunity to play; and he did not terminate the contract so that the plaintiff would be free to play for another professional team," he stated.

"What he did was threaten the plaintiff," said the supreme court judge.

Rocks Hit Another High Note

SURREY — Victoria Shamrocks, again finishing with a splurge, took over the Western Lacrosse Association lead Thursday night.

They did it with a typical performance which took them past New Westminster Salmonbellies, 15-13.

It was the third victory in six days and the second in 24 hours for the Islanders, whose last defeat came when they squandered a 9-2 lead in the second period and eventually got edged out by Coquitlam Adanacs.

Since then, the Shamrocks have dumped the Adanacs, by 16-4, and Vancouver Burrards, by 14-10, in addition to their great Thursday win.

They made it against the league champions by scoring the only five goals of the third period. Before that, they had seen an 8-4 first-period lead turn into a 10-13 second-period deficit.

Rookie Tom Levasseur was among the brightest of the winners. Among his three goals were his club's 12th and 13th, and they came a minute apart to give the Shamrocks the momentum.

Brian Thompson followed with what was to be the winning goal and Ranjit Dillon added insurance with his third scoring shot and fifth point of the game.

Also standing out were veteran-goalkeeper Skip Chapman and Ivan Thompson, who took to playmaking Thursday and grabbed the individual point lead.

He scored only once but drew six assists to boost his point total to 44, which is five more than owned by Gord Frederickson of Burrards.

Chapman contributed four assists as well as steady shot blocking which reached a peak when he held Salmonbellies scoreless in the final period.

Shamrocks, who collapsed in the middle period, had most trouble with Al Lewthwaite. The 240-pound defenceman scored three goals and had three assists.

Ex-Cardinal Speaks Out Blames Woes on Owner

St. Louis' struggling Cardinals lost again, and Thursday also brought a stinging condemnation from a former player.

Joe Hague, former Card first baseman-outfielder now with the streaking Cincinnati Reds, said St. Louis owner August Busch has traded a winning ball club out of town just because of personality differences.

"They've got a lot of problems on the Cardinal club," said Hague, who went to Cincinnati for outfielder Bernie Carbo, "And I'd have to say that Busch has a lot to do with it.

"Sure, we (the Cards) got two good pitchers in Rick Wise and Scipio Spinks. But they don't compare with what we gave up. Believe me, we lost a lot when we gave up those two left-handers (Steve Carlton to the Philadelphia Phillies and Jerry Reuss to the Houston Astros)."

The last-place Cards dropped 14½ games behind the Eastern-Division leaders, New York Mets, when Chicago Cubs scored six runs in the first inning on the way to a 7-3 victory over St. Louis. Bill Hands scattered six hits for the win while Wise, now 4-5, absorbed the loss.

Resourceful Losers Had Narrow Escape

Poor Churchill Hotel. It's not that they can't win. They just keep coming up with new ways to lose.

Thursday night it was an infield pop-up, which should have been the game-ending out. It was dropped, opening the gate for a five-run nightmare and giving Brentwood Butler Bothers an 11-9 victory over the winless hotelmen in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

Churchill had a 9-6 lead going into the seventh inning. They gave up one more run on three singles but didn't appear in danger with two out. Greg Corbett then hit the fly ball, towards first base, that was mishandled. It scored another run and two more singles accounted for Butlers' final three runs and nailed the Hotelmen with their 12th consecutive loss.

Hornets Retain Bantam Laurels

Saanich Hornets, champions of the Junior Bantam Canadian Football League for the third straight season, will meet Saanich Chargers in one sudden-death semi-final Sunday at Braefoot Park.

Hornets nailed down the league title by downing second-place Oak Bay Marauders, 44-5, in the final game of the regular schedule.

Marauders and Oak Bay Crusaders will meet in the other playoff semi-final Sunday at Braefoot Park starting at 1 p.m. The Hornets-Chargers battle is scheduled to start at 11 a.m.

The righthander, who struck out eight and only allowed one base on balls, lost her no-hitter when Mavis Turner hit a two-out double in the last inning.

The victory moved Empress into a second-place deadlock with Cablevision, a half-game behind undefeated Stockers North Americans.

In another game Thursday, home runs by Marilyn Sluggett and Stephanie Corby helped Esquimalt Combos to a 17-6 decision over Westendale Constructionettes.

Old Rivals Meet Again

A lot of memories will be stirred when Geordie Johnston and Nanaimo's Fred Fulla line up at opposite ends of Memorial Arena on Saturday night. They were goalkeeping rivals in many an epic battle when Victoria Shamrocks and the Timbermen fought for Inter-City Lacrosse League supremacy, and they meet again in annual Oldtimers game between two clubs. Introductions are at 8 and veterans will start 60-minute game at 8:30. Preliminary game between minor league club starts at 7. Proceeds go to minor lacrosse.

gh Note

have dumped the Adanacs, by 16-4, and Vancouver Burrards, by 14-10, in addition to their great Thursday win.

They made it against the league champions by scoring the only five goals of the third period. Before that, they had seen an 8-4 first-period lead turn into a 10-13 second-period deficit.

Rookie Tom Levasseur was among the brightest of the winners. Among his three goals were his club's 12th and 13th, and they came a minute apart to give the Shamrocks the momentum.

Brian Thompson followed with what was to be the winning goal and Ranjit Dillon added insurance with his third scoring shot and fifth point of the game.

Also standing out were veteran-goalkeeper Skip Chapman and Ivan Thompson, who took to playmaking Thursday and grabbed the individual point lead.

He scored only once but drew six assists to boost his point total to 44, which is five more than owned by Gord Frederickson of Burrards.

Chapman contributed four assists as well as steady shot blocking which reached a peak when he held Salmonbellies scoreless in the final period.

Shamrocks, who collapsed in the middle period, had most trouble with Al Lewthwaite. The 240-pound defenceman scored three goals and had three assists.

New Playoff Format Adopted In Canadian Football League

REGINA (CP) — The Eastern and Western conferences of the Canadian Football League have adopted a uniform system of sudden-death playoffs, league officials announced Thursday.

Under the new system, the team finishing third plays the second place finisher in a single, sudden-death game. The winner plays the No. 1 team in the regular season in one sudden-death final. The winner represents his conference in the Grey Cup.

The system will be in effect in the West this fall, but television commitments prevent the Eastern Conference from changing until next year, said CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur.

Since 1965, the Western Conference has been using a sudden-death semi-final game between the second and third place finishers, with the winner playing the first-place team in a best-of-three final. Before 1965, the two semi-finalists played a total points semi-final.

In the East, the second and third-place finishers meet in a sudden-death semi-final, the winner playing the first-place team in a two-game total-points final.

Gaudaur said he considered the uniform playoff system to be one of the biggest accomplishements since the formation of one league in 1968.

MEMBERS PRAISED

Playoff format remains strictly a conference decision. Gaudaur praised members of the two conferences for putting aside some of their own preferences to adopt the uniform playoffs.

Rogers Lehew of Calgary, one of the Western officials who worked out the uniform system, said that the sudden-death system could allow longer seasons or an earlier Grey Cup, although the Grey Cup date already has been set for the next two years.

"We are now planning 16 games in 14 weeks in our regular schedule," Lehew said. "In two years we might be able to go to 16 games in 15 weeks to move the Grey Cup game ahead a week."

The uniform playoff system also will likely result in increased ticket prices for the single games.

Gaudaur said this is strictly a conference matter, "but I think it is reasonable to assume that prices for the single games will be increased."

Gaudaur also said the CFL officials had spent a portion of the Thursday session receiving information and a progress report on negotiations with the players association's request for additional money for pre-season and post-season games.

Commercial trollers have been getting good catches of big chinook salmon in the Swiftsure bank waters at the entrance to Juan de Fuca Strait, and that provides quite an optimistic outlook for Sooke to Oak Bay sports anglers.

Some of the big chinooks have already arrived in the sports fishing waters. More appear to be on the way.

Otter Point fishing is picking up, and among the lucky anglers last weekend was Jumbo Davies with a 24-pounder.

The best fishing for big chinooks has been in the Secretary Island-Beechey Head waters, where some anglers have been taking limits. But there have been some days when the water has been a little too bumpy for fishing.

Pedder Bay waters are producing a few chinooks and Oak Bay has been giving up the odd big one.

Saanich Inlet has been producing limits of good sized chinooks and numbers of spring grilse in the one and one-half-pound bracket and coho grilse in the better than three-pound bracket.

"Limit catches are commonplace and almost all anglers are coming in with some salmon, mainly caught in the circle from Goldstream Island to the Narrows," reports May Hall from her Finlayson Arm boathouse.

Willis Point to the Boulder run has been producing jacksprings and bluebacks.

Deep Cove waters have been fairly productive and Porter Pass has been good for both chinooks in the 10 to 12-pound range and bluebacks.

Hugh Twist took a 24-pounder this week off Skinner Point in Cowichan Bay using a Strip-Teaser, Abe and Al Flasher, one pound of weight and 150 feet of line. Bold Bluff area of Sansum Narrows is producing chinooks down deep, but there are so many dogfish it is difficult to get a line down.

Tent, Thetis, Kuper and Coffin Point waters are reported good with a white or black and white hootchie ahead of a revolving flasher, fished deep, taking them.

Fishing in mid-Island has been an on-again, off-again proposition and one theory is that northerly winds are taking the fish out into mid-Strait. Catches around Nanaimo, when anglers have been able to get out of the water between gales, have been mostly chinook salmon. Anglers are "wondering where the blues went."

Off Claytons and Northwest Bay, some chinooks have been taken but the blues have been scarce. They started to show again in the last couple of days off Ballenas Island.

From Deep Bay, John Cushing reports spotty fishing for blues but he says there are "lots of chinooks in the seven-pound range."

The blues, he says, appear to be out in the open water.

Blues and chinooks are being taken off the Comox buoy and the waters between Mitlenatch Island, in towards Oyster River and down to the King Koho Resort are reported to be full of blues — in two sizes, some around one and one-half pounds and some three pounds and a little heavier.

The high tides just before dark have been bringing some excellent chinook fishing to Bates Beach and the Little River waters. The herring seem to come in with the tide and when you spot the herring that is the time and place to fish for the chinooks.

In Alberni Inlet Rainey Bay has been giving up big chinooks.

Freshwater-fishing reports are good.

Upper and Lower Campbell Lakes, as well as the smaller Gold River area lakes, were all "hot" last weekend.

There is a late run of winter steelhead in the Browns River, a tributary of the Puntledge. Now is the time for cutthroats on the fly in the Somass, Sproat and almost all rivers.

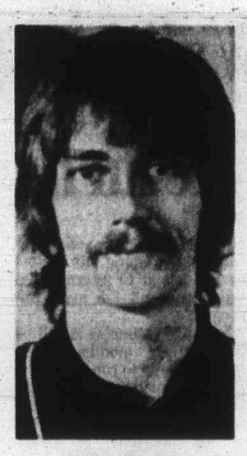

Sproat and Great Central Lakes have been good for trout, with the power-house (eight miles up the lake) and out in front of the Ark Resort the best spots in Great Central. Red and black Flatfish is recommended.

Cowichan Lake is producing well for both fly fisherman and gang-troll anglers. They are still taking black ant flies and a March Brown fly.

On Cowichan River in the lower reaches around Marion's Pool, cutthroats are taking small brown hackle dry flies, Gibbs Zero spoons and Luck Nite spoons.

Thorburn

Sanudo Leads by One After Career-Low 65

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Obscure Cesar Sanudo, using a putter he borrowed from Lee Trevino, needed only 25 strokes on the greens Thursday as he forged a seven-under-par 65 for the first-round lead in the $175,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

The 28-year-old Sanudo, a United States citizen who was born in Mexico, held a one-stroke lead over veteran Billy Casper. Casper had a pair of eagle threes en route to a 66.

Trevino, winner of the Danny Thomas-Memphis Open two weeks ago, and Tony Jacklin of England, were in a group at 69.

Arnold Palmer had a 70, a distant five strokes away, and said he felt his game "is just on the verge of becoming pretty good."

PAR DESTROYED

About half the field of 144 matched or broke par on the 72, 78-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course.

But only Casper could stay close to Sanudo, a four-year tour regular who won the 1970 satellite Azalea Open but hasn't threatened in a major tournament.

It was his career low round in major competition, and won him $1,500 under a new policy which provides that sum for the leader each round in selected tournaments. It's one of the largest cheques of his career.

Sanudo had won only $5,755 this season with his best finish a tie for 13th at Houston.

He said he borrowed a putter from Trevino Wednesday, "a beat-up ol' thing he had in his locker. It's the one he won the U.S. Open with last year — the one he won everything with."

Sanudo played the back nine first, and needed the putter only once on the first two holes he played. He missed the green on the 10th hole, but chipped in from 40 feet for a birdie, then ran in a 20-foot birdie putt on the next hole.

He scored an eagle two on the 16th, holding a 80-yard sand wedge shot, but took his only bogey on the next hole, missing the green.

Going to the front side, he made 15-foot birdie putts on the second and sixth holes, two-putted for a birdie four after reaching the fifth with a three-wood second shot and took first alone when he chipped to six feet and made the putt on the final hole.

North American Champ To Display Skills Here

Bought a snooker table and fancy yourself as a sort of rumpus room Minnesota Fats?

Cliff Thorburn, a former Victorian who is the North American snooker champion, will give a series of exhibition games in the 325-seat MacLaurin Theatre at the University of Victoria June 9, 10 and 11.

Main opponents for Thorburn will be Bill Werbeniuk, pro at Vancouver's Chenier Hall, and Ernie Jay of Victoria.

A Vancouver Island snooker tournament is being run in conjunction with the exhibition series. The semi-finals and finals will be played as preliminaries to the big show and the winner will get a crack at Thorburn — if he feels so inclined.

The North American champion will also give displays of ball control and trick shots each night.

Promoter Don McAlpine said Wednesday night the staging of the exhibition in a theatre is a bid to "take this great game from behind closed doors and covered windows and present it to the public in an attractive way."

Toronto Hit Second Time As Whalers Harpoon Ley

Colonist News Services

Apparently making steady progress in its effort to get started by next season, the World Hockey Association Thursday announced the signing of a National Hockey League regular.

Latest to jump to the WHA was Rick Ley, 23-year-old defenceman who has played regularly with Toronto Maple Leafs for three seasons after getting into 38 NHL games during the 1968-69 season.

Ley is the third NHL player to sign with New England Whalers and is the second Toronto defenceman to move to the new league. With Ley on the Whalers will be Toronto-teammate Brad Selwood and Larry Pleau, a centre from Montreal Canadiens.

The Whalers, who now have 12 players under contract, also announced the signing of two minor league and two college players.

Cunniff was with Rochester of the American league this past season, his fifth in minor professional hockey. Hyndman has played in the AHL with Montreal Voyageurs and Boston Braves.

Ottawa Nationals of the WHA also made some news Thursday when manager Buck Houle announced the signing of the team's first two players.

They are Robert Leduc, a 28-year-old centre, who has had seven full seasons with Providence Reds of the AHL, and Ron Climie, a 22-year-old leftwinger who has played two seasons with Kansas City in the Central league.

The Nationals, however, are still without a coach. Houle also announced that Eddie Bush, who had been rumored as signed, had decided to remain in junior hockey.

Meanwhile, the WHA is preparing to ready a schedule for 11 clubs, having admitted a Philadelphia group on Wednesday.

In announcing the Philadelphia franchise, a spokesman said that the WHA hoped to make a "major signing announcement" on Saturday.

Students Ready For Island Meet

DUNCAN — Young athletes from all over the Island will flock here Saturday for the Vancouver Island junior high school track and field championships.

Central had 115 points, Lansdowne of Victoria was second with 112, Woodlands of Nanaimo third with 107 and Elizabeth Fisher of Saanich fourth with 104.

Last year, Central also won the Victoria District junior high meet but the school placed only fifth in the recent Victoria meet at Centennial Stadium. Oak Bay won that one with Lansdowne a close second, Arbutus third and Colquitz fourth.

All Victoria area schools will be represented at this year's meet, which starts at 10 a.m. Saturday with heats and has finals scheduled to start by 1 p.m.

The main up-Island force is again expected to be Woodlands, champions in 1970.

Meet director is Denny Beaveridge of Quamichan Junior Secondary School.

Chinese Sprint Star Now Walking To Miss Games but Plans Return

TAIPEI (AP) — Chi Cheng, the Taiwanese farm girl whose sprints propelled her into our world's records and the international track and field limelight, has started to walk again and plans to return to running.

Seven weeks after she announced leg problems would keep her from the Munich Olympics this summer and five weeks after an operation, the 27-year-old runner reports her injured left leg much improved. Doctors say she will run again.

"The muscles in that part of my leg are so relaxed I can stretch it as I haven't been able to do for over a year," she said recently.

JOGGING ADVISED

She said her doctor has even advised her to jog a bit every day to exercise the muscle.

"Actually, I'm well enough now to leave the hospital," she said, "but I plan on staying on for a while for therapy."

There now are some indications of the same problem in her right leg, however.

"I think the problem began in my left leg because I use that one most, for starts and hurdles," Miss Chi said.

"But about five months ago the right leg started to hurt a little, and the doctor says it could be the same thing," she said.

Miss Chi said the problem isn't major, however, and that doctors at the Veterans General Hospital outside Taipei don't want to operate on it.

Miss Chi has become a popular heroine in Taiwan, where the Nationalist Chinese government's foreign policy reverses have made any claims by the island to international prominence all the more important.

Miss Chi estimates it will be five or six months before she's in shape to run again.

She is planning to go to Munich this summer, however, if only as a representative of the Republic of China Olympic Committee.

Spokane Group Prepared To Seek CFL Franchise

SPOKANE (UPI) — The president of a local sports group says his organization has applied for a franchise in the Canadian Football League if the league expands for the 1973 season.

Ed Justus, president of Spokane Pro Sports, said the group made an approaching gesture last year to the CFL for possible inclusion in the league but this year has made a firm application.

"The Canadian Football League had dismissed at its annual meeting last year the possibility of expanding the league and taking in teams from the United States," Justus said.

He said the league was now operating with nine teams and had expressed interest to expanding to 12 teams.

Justus said, "if it does expand, it would like a team from this area, one from the midwest and one from the east."

He said groups in New York and Chicago have applied for inclusion in the league in addition to Spokane.

Even if the CFL doesn't expand in 1973, Spokane plans to continue its application, Justus said.

This city is already involved in Canadian sports — in hockey. Earlier this month, for the second time in three years, Spokane Jets won the Allan Cup, emblematic of supremacy in Canadian senior amateur hockey.

Justus said Spokane's Joe Albi Stadium would be one of the larger stadiums in the league. He said its capacity of about 36,000 is larger than several of the stadiums currently in use in the CFL.

Entry Extension For Mt. Brenton

CHEMAINUS — Entries for the second annual Mt. Brenton Open golf tournament will be accepted right up until draw time Saturday.

Largely due to its date conflicting with that of the Victoria City amateur championship, the $1,800 Mt. Brenton tournament still has below maximum entry. As of Thursday evening it stood at 76 amateurs and nine professionals.

The pros will be playing for $800 in cash. It will be split among the top six with $275 for the winner and other prizes of $200, $150, $100, $50 and $25.

Amateurs will play for $1,000 in merchandise prizes with top prizes for both low net and low gross scores.

Play will be over 36 holes with two rounds on Saturday and two rounds on Sunday over the 3036-yard par-35 Mt. Brenton layout.

D-Day Ceremony 'Challenge'

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen will challenge the First Battalion, Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) on its right to march on city streets at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

The "challenge" will be part of D-Day commemorative ceremonies to be held by the Canadian Scottish Regiment Saturday evening. Steeped in British history, the ceremony of the "challenge" has only been held twice before in Victoria.

The "challenge" ceremony, which will be held in front of city hall, is in conjunction with the freedom of the city of Victoria which was bestowed on the Canadian Scottish Regiment in 1964.

On D-Day, June 6, 1944, the First Battalion, Canadian Scottish Regiment, landed in Normandy as part of the Allied Force which was to liberate Europe.

Since then, it has become traditional that the serving battalion mark the occasion annually by parading to the cenotaph.

After the "challenge" ceremony, the regiment will march on to the cenotaph in front of the legislative buildings.

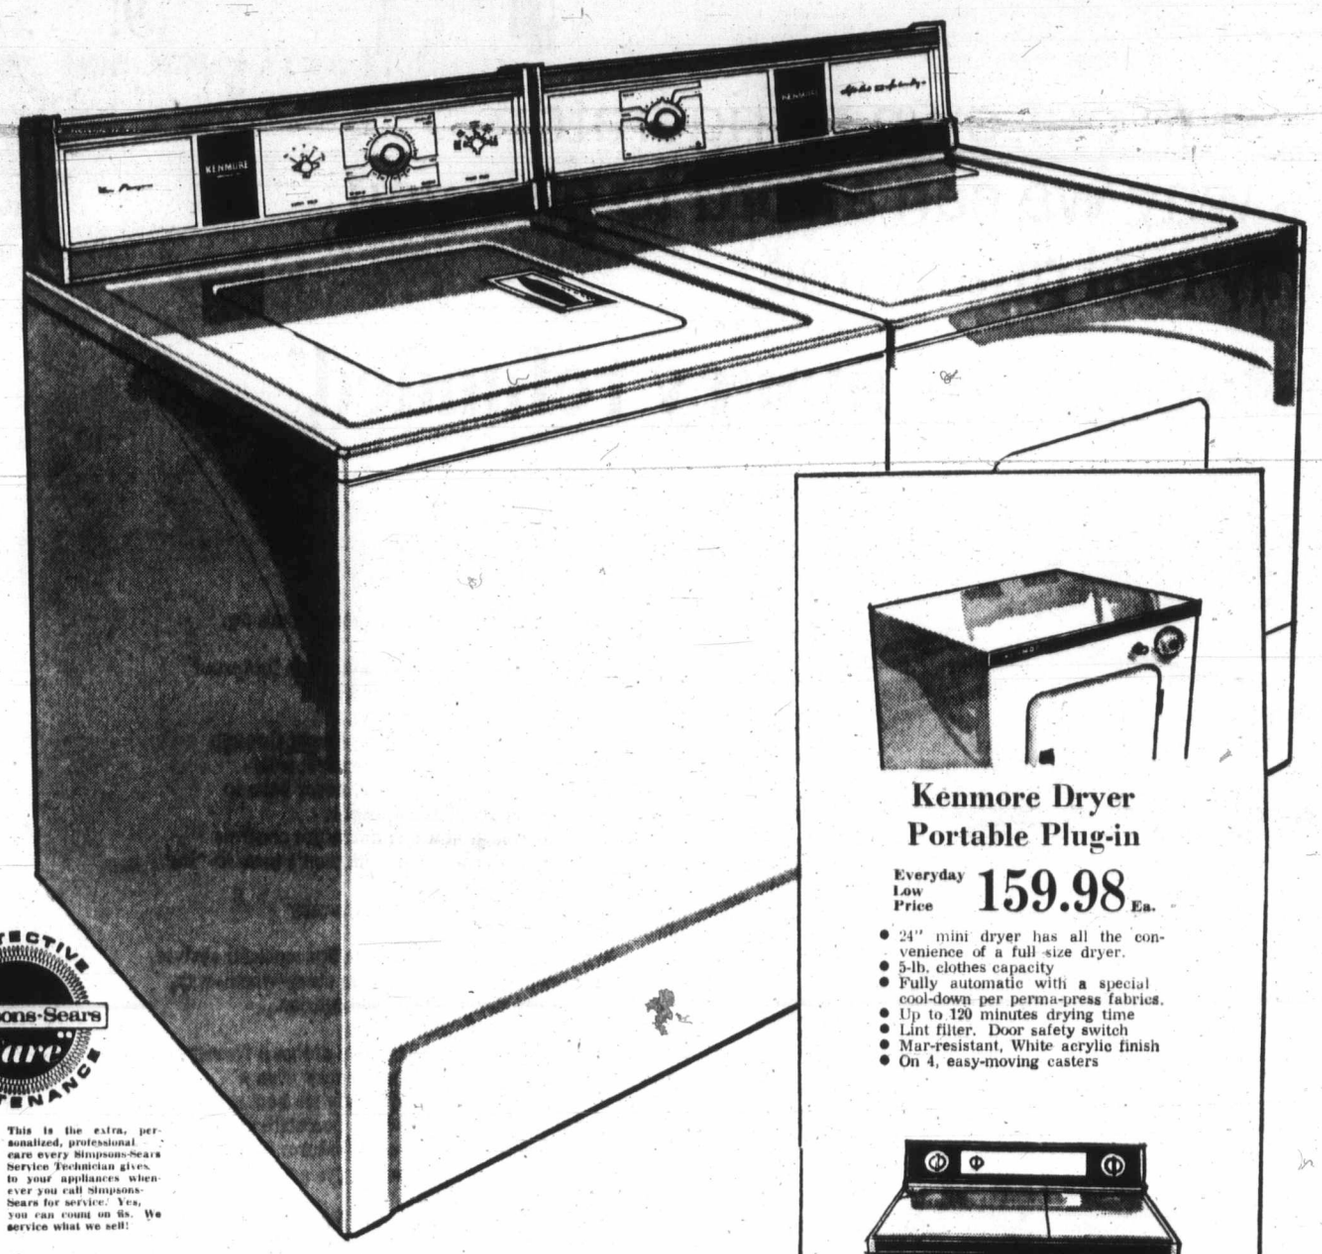

At 8:15 p.m. Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson will inspect the Canadian Scottish Regiment on the lawns adjacent to the cenotaph.

Included in the ceremony will be a retreat ceremony by the regimental pipes and drums. Ceremonies will conclude with a marchpast the Empress Hotel with Nicholson taking the salute.

PROVINCIAL COURT

The highest blood-alcohol reading in a drinking-driving case that veteran Victoria Provincial Court observers could remember was reported Thursday to Judge E. F. N. Robinson in the case of a 29-year-old Colwood area man — .36 per cent.

The man, Robert Douglas Williamson of 1021 Costin, was fined $350 by Robinson after pleading guilty to a Colwood RCMP charge of being impaired Tuesday afternoon while in care or control of a vehicle.

Court was told Williamson was apprehended by police near his home. Two breath-analysis readings were taken, the first showing .35 per cent alcohol in the blood and the second .36 per cent.

(The law considers .08 per cent sufficient for a traffic conviction while .15 per cent is generally considered high enough to sustain an impaired-driving charge and .30 per cent is normally enough to have police send the driver to hospital.)

Five other persons were fined by Robinson after pleading guilty to separate charges of impaired driving. They were:

Timothy Richard Killins, 18, of 1178 Rhoda, stopped May 11 in Saanich and fined $400.

Ronald Allan Nicolson, 19, CFB Esquimalt, stopped May 13 in Saanich and fined $400.

Thomas Alfred Thomas, 23, of 23 Eaton, stopped May 19 in Saanich and fined $400.

In the court section of Judge William Ostler, the judge said the use of other people's credit cards for purposes of defrauding is increasing "and there will have to be jail sentences" if it continues.

He ordered suspended sentences and 18-month probationary terms for Allan David Friesen, 17, and Elaine Patricia Volk, 21, both of Vancouver, who pleaded guilty May 23 to a joint Victoria charge of false pretences involving more than $50.

The charge resulted from their use of another person's credit card to obtain $195.50 worth of goods May 20 at The Bay. They said they had bought the card two weeks before for $25 on a Vancouver street.

Rodney Kevin Martin Steigenberger, 18, of 256 Atkins, was sentenced to a total of six months definite and eight months indeterminate and Ostler said he will recommend the time be served in a forestry camp.

Steigenberger had earlier pleaded guilty to or been convicted of three charges — one of uttering in Victoria and one each in Colwood of breakin and theft and false pretences involving more than $50.

The breakin charge, subject of a trial, concerned the theft of cans of oil and an adding machine Jan. 2 from View Royal Gulf Service, 298 Island Highway. The other charges resulted from bad cheques for $40 and $35.

Suspended sentences and one-year probationary terms were set by Ostler for Scott Fellner, 18, of 1057 Moss, and Lawrence Robert Green, 19, of 516 Dumaresq, who pleaded guilty May 18 to a joint two-count Saanich charge of personation of police officers.

They were charged after two drivers were stopped about April 15 by three young men using a rotating red light in their car. The judge said he regarded the third youth, earlier fined and put on probation, as the ringleader in the incident.

Garry Gerald Michael Daniel Andrew Morey, 21, of 1210 Tattersal, was remanded to June 14 for a pre-sentence report and sentence after he was found guilty by Ostler following a trial on a charge of possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking. The case involved 51 capsules found March 14 near a fence in Saanich.

John Keith Bartlett, 27, of Saskatoon, was given a nominal one-day jail term after pleading guilty to a charge of possession of a narcotic — a small amount found when he was checked by police Feb. 18 in downtown Victoria.

About 6 Per Cent

Car Insurance Hikes Nearer

Many Vancouver Islanders can expect at least a six per cent increase in car insurance rates effective July 1, according to an eastern Canada insurance source.

The new increased rate schedules were filed by the Independent Insurance Conference of Toronto, which represents insurance companies across Canada.

The rates follow approval of new car premium schedules by the B.C. Insurance Board.

Although the new rates have not been officially announced indications are that over-all premiums will increase by about 8 per cent in Vancouver and by as much as 14 per cent in certain inland areas of the province.

A spokesman for the Canadian Underwriters Association, the largest group of automobile insurers in Canada, said the association has not yet formally filed its proposed premium increases with the B.C. Insurance Board.

However, the CUA expects to have its new rate schedules in use before July 1.

An official of the insurance board said the new premiums will be announced only when they go into effect.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Federation of Labor has called for immediate government action to provide government-operated car insurance.

Federation secretary Ray Haynes said this week, "Our federation has repeatedly called upon the provincial government to provide low-cost government car insurance similar to either Saskatchewan or Manitoba plans.

"The announced ... projected rate increase for B.C. makes government action imperative. When car insurance was made mandatory in B.C. we warned against leaving it in private hands and predicted the public would be gouged."

Motor Repair Fraud Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police charged the operator of a city service station with defrauding a customer. Asad Barias, 31, who leases a Pacific 66 station, is accused of defrauding Lila Fuhrmann of New Westminster of a sum of money by representing that he supplied a rebuilt motor for her car. Police said the crown will allege the motor was the car's original.

Buried Lines Fight

Protesting an apparent double standard planned by B.C. Hydro in future power lines serving Greater Victoria, a group of concerned citizens is asking Hydro to put all transmission lines underground, to spread extra costs equally among all province residents and to have underground service planned, financed and constructed by Hydro alone.

The Committee for Underground Transmission was formed about a month ago, numbers about 50 members headed by Dr. Roy Sutherland, a general practitioner, and has already made its views known to Saanich council, cabinet members, and B.C. Hydro itself.

Of immediate concern to the committee is the powerline from Goward substation in Saanich down Interurban Road to the Trans-Canada Highway, then parallel to Douglas Street until it turns off to the Horsey substation off Blanshard.

This line would be of 90-foot towers as far as Dupplin Road, a block north of the Victoria-Saanich border, then go underground for the rest of the way.

The towers themselves are anathema to the committee as a blot on the scenery of the capital region. others, headed by Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich and the Saanich Advisory Planning Commission, have also opposed the overhead lines.

Hydro offered to put the line underground if Saanich would pay $385,000 of the extra cost of $1,156,000 — then later reduced the Saanich share to $200,000.

No extra cost has been mentioned for the section underground in Victoria and the committee points out that Saanich would, in effect, be paying alone extra costs for a service of scant benefit to that municipality.

"If Saanich were to accept the high cost to put this line underground," the committee says, "B.C. Hydro could argue in the future that other proposed lines to Oak Bay and Esquimalt should also be assumed by Saanich ratepayers."

One such proposed line would follow McKenzie Avenue to University of Victoria; another from the university to Haultain Street near Veterans Hospital and from there to a point behind Mayfair Shopping Centre.

Hydro, the committee maintains, "is a public, crown corporation, supplying electricity to all British Columbia. The company should not have different policies for each municipality."

City Billboard Ban Could Close Company

Seaboard Advertising could be forced to close down if the city of Victoria decides to ban the use of commercial "third party" billboards, according to W. T. Fraser, local representative for the Vancouver-based firm.

He wouldn't comment on the outcome of a meeting earlier Thursday with Mayor Peter Pollen. Fraser also declined to state the number of billboards that would be affected if the city adopted the proposed legislation.

The recommendation to phase out all commercial billboards during the next three years, was made Tuesday by council's planning committee.

Council is expected to deal with the matter at next Thursday's meeting. If the recommendation is approved, no new billboards would be permitted and existing ones would have to be removed within a three-year period.

Sidney Man Makes Prize Violin

Four Victoria area entries won high honors in the Violin Makers' Association of B.C. annual competition held Saturday in Haney, B.C.

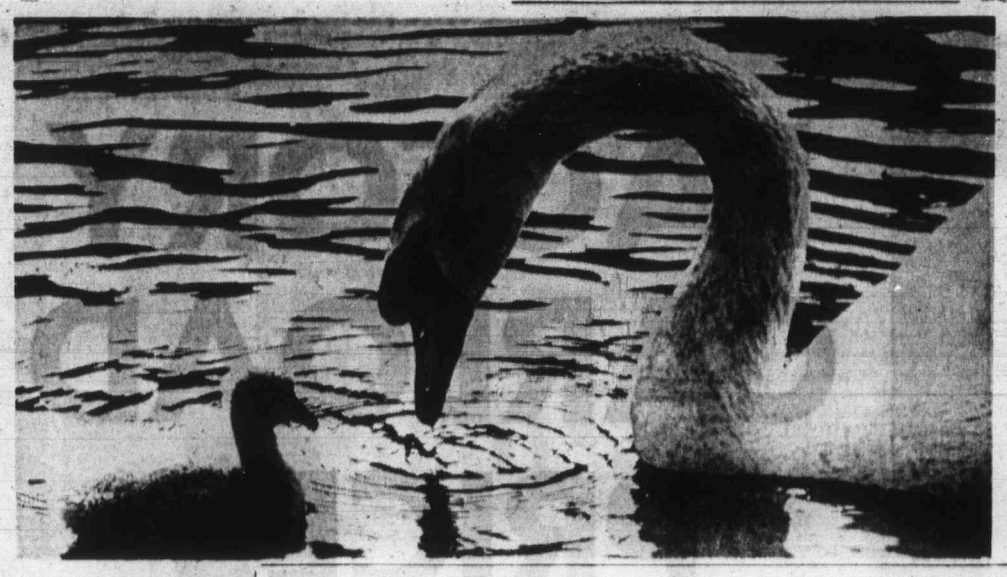

Entered in the international contest were 29 violins, nine violas and two cellos. The instruments were played and judged by the Purcell String Quartet, of Vancouver.

Hugh Sutherland, of 9346 Webster Place, Sidney, placed first for his viola entry. Sutherland also received the centennial grand trophy as an award for the best instrument in the show.

Runner-up for both of Sutherland also received the centennial, of 2740 Dewdney Place, Saanich.

We don't expect Pinto to put VW, Datsun and Toyota out of business tomorrow morning.

But you can't blame us for trying by giving you some things that they don't.

The little imports are well accepted. Pinto is well accepted. Pinto offers some things they don't. They offer some things Pinto doesn't.

You'll make your decision based on what you want, but, first, make sure you know all the facts.

Let's take the matter of equipment. Some of the things the imports offer as standard equipment, Pinto offers as an optional package. All that means is that Pinto gives you a choice.

Say you want front disc brakes, body side moulding, rear window defroster, wheel covers and white walls on your Pinto. Order this group. And you're still going to pay less for your Pinto than the three leading imports.* Don't order it and you're going to pay that much less. You see, with Pinto you don't have to pay for what you don't really want.

Like some of the imports, Pinto has a policy of continuing improvement. Since Pinto was introduced, we've made numerous changes. Many of these changes you might never notice, but some you may, such as an improved mounting of the automatic transmission to reduce the NVH level. All these improvements, apparent or not add up to a better Pinto and better value.

Key parts in Pinto like the starter motor, drive train, and rear axle are all what we term "over-built". That is, they are strong enough for bigger, heavier cars.

If it's beginning to look to you like we made Pinto good to stack up against the imports, you're right. But we have also built in some differences which we, obviously, believe are advantages.

For example, Pinto has a wider stance than the three imports mentioned above. That means better stability on the highway and in high crosswinds.

Pinto has rack-and-pinion steering. VW, Datsun and Toyota don't. Pinto gives you precise, responsive handling at all times.

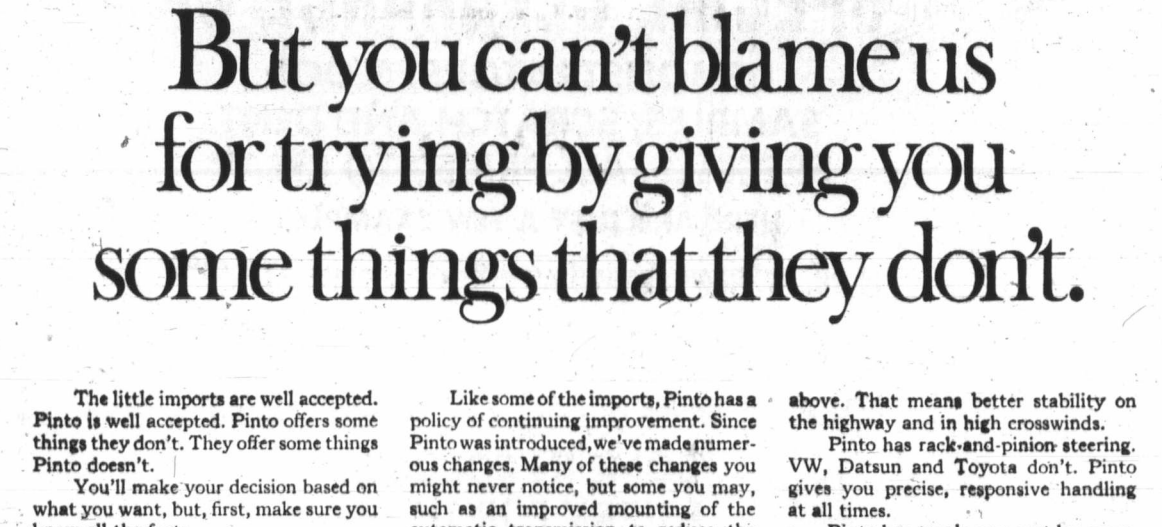

Pinto has ample rear seat leg room. You might not notice that unless you're the one who has to sit in the rear seat.

We believe Pinto is the sportiest-looking small car around. That might not be the most important thing to you, but it's kind of nice.

One thing which Pinto appears to be lacking is that comfortable reverse snob appeal that the imports have. But did you ever think of the possibilities of reverse-reverse snob appeal?

Maybe it's time for you to take a closer look at Pinto. At your local Ford Dealers.

Expect more from Ford.

KING FISHERMAN

June

With June King Fisherman anglers now start on a new round to win Prince Buttons and monthly hidden weight prizes.

All anglers and weigh-in stations are asked to make sure all May entries are now in the mail to the King Fisherman office, so that no one is left out of the May draw for prizes or the awards for Prince Buttons.

There will be 25 buttons for the heaviest fish in each of the saltwater classes and 15 buttons for the heaviest fish in each of the three fresh water categories, with five buttons reserved for lake trout, other than rainbow or steelhead.

Gold-plated buttons are awarded each month for the heaviest fish in each category. An angler may win only one button a year in each category, except for the gold buttons.

This year King Fisherman decals will be awarded anglers who qualify twice for Prince Buttons.

'Why Save Old Buildings?' Community Planners Subject

The question of saving old buildings will be discussed from many angles at 8:30 p.m. June 8 in the Colonial Inn by a five-member panel at the annual general meeting of the Community Planning Association of Canada, Capital Region branch.

Under the general heading Why Save Old Buildings? the panel will examine such questions as Do we want old buildings preserved? Are they economical to convert? What is this heritage we hear so much about? Is Bastion Square a success?

Announcing the discussion, president John Di Castri said "It is important that the community have an opportunity to hear this topic discussed from all sides so that a reasonable attitude can develop with regard to the old buildings in Victoria."

Unclaimed Bicycles On Auction

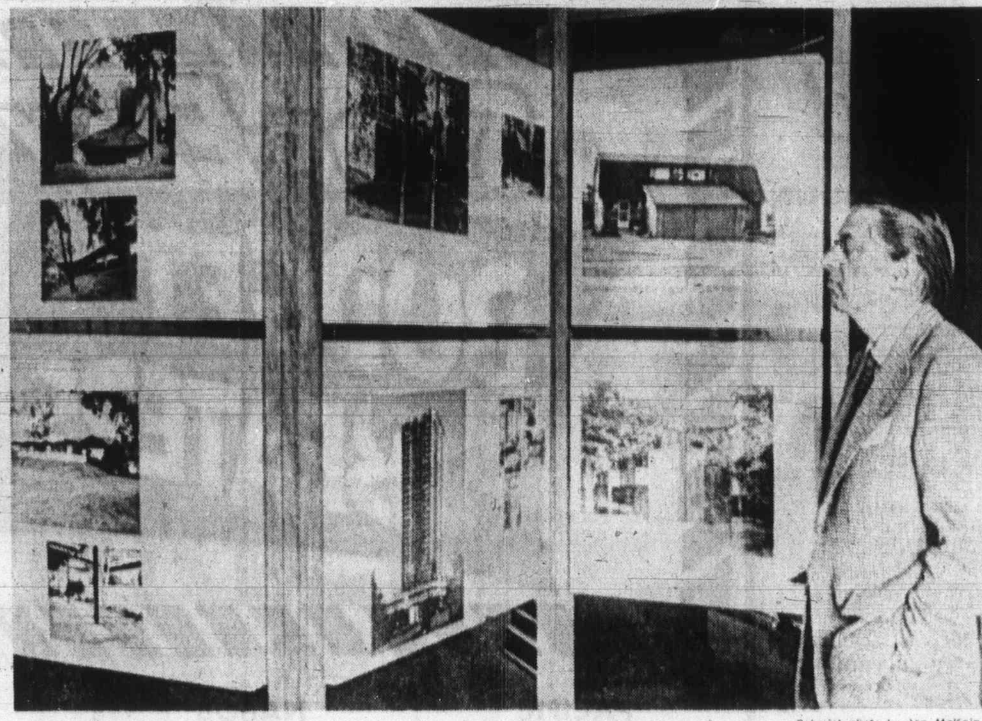

The latest in the semi-annual Victoria police bicycle auctions, which are among the most popular events of their kind in this area, will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in the compound beside the police station at 625 Fisgard.

Police said Thursday about 75 bicycles will be on sale — a few 10-speeds, some three-speeds, standard bicycles and quite a few parts — and the sale will continue until everything is gone, which usually doesn't take long.

Sale items will be on view for an hour before the auction begins. Proceeds go to general city revenues and the last auction six months ago brought the record price of $95 for a 10-speed Peugeot.

The bicycles will be those recovered by police between about 10 months ago and four months back and not claimed in the meantime. Police hold a bicycle at least four months before putting it on auction.

Anyone who thinks his missing bicycle might be in the compound has until 8 a.m. Saturday to check.

Best Homes

Canda's best residential housing designs currently on display in the Empress Hotel's Duke of York room is inspected by Vancouver architect John Roberts. The exhibit is open to the public and is being shown by the Canadian Housing Design Council. On display are photographs, plans and commentary of 46 designs of single houses, multiple dwellings selected from 240 entries submitted to the council from across Canada.

Teacher Federation Supporters Elected

A number of candidates who voiced strong support for the B.C. Teachers' Federation were elected to the executive membership of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association at an annual general meeting Wednesday night.

Elected first vice-president was James Ross of Mount View senior high; second vice-president, John Sitwell of Highrock junior high; recording secretary, Allan Jones of Macaulay elementary; and treasurer, Leo Strathold of Craigflower elementary.

The teachers accepted a report from a special committee setting the criteria for competence of teachers.

They approved a levy of $10 a teacher for in-service activity such as seminars and study sessions. About $13,000 will be spent on the activity in the coming year.

CRASH DIETS AREN'T THE ANSWER!

Do you still believe that toast is less fattening than bread? That margarine has fewer calories than butter? Or that protein "burns" fat? No wonder your diet isn't working! According to Harvard nutritionist, Professor Jean Mayer, you're the victim of myths and misunderstandings which often cause weight-watchers to switch from "sensible" diets to "crash" diets which are dangerous—and unnecessary! Why not learn how to sidestep the traps into which many well-meaning, determined dieters fall? Read TEN WAYS TO MAKE YOUR DIET WORK—one of 34 articles and features in the June Reader's Digest.

Never Misled Unions—Chabot

Labor Minister James Chabot Thursday denied that he intended to mislead union representatives by suggesting the provincial government would not use compulsory arbitration to end the B.C. construction industry dispute.

The minister told reporters he understood some representatives of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council were claiming he had indicated at a meeting last Monday that the government would not intervene in the current work stoppage.

"I want to make it very clear that at that particular time neither the premier nor the minister of labor had considered compulsory arbitration," Chabot said. "I certainly didn't indicate the government would never use compulsory arbitration in this dispute. The one thing I could not do is close off all my options."

In the circumstances, Chabot said, he was surprised by the union accusation that the Construction Labor Relations Association, representing employers, was bargaining on the assumption that the government would not intervene.

"On Monday I was fairly optimistic this issue could be resolve (without government intervention)," the minister added. "However, after discussing it with the Construction Labor Relations Association and the building trades council I concluded there was no way they could resolve their own problems.

"I believe both sides had not bargained in good faith.

"My mind is made up. There will be no deviation from the position taken by the government that they will be given until noon Wednesday to return to the bargaining or the dispute will be referred to the Mediation Commission for binding arbitration.

Painters Wage Pact To Membership Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — C. J. Connaghan, president of the Construction Labor Relations Association, announced Thursday that tentative agreement has been reached on contracts covering six locals of the painters union.

The agreements, which affect about 1,600 of the 30,000 construction tradesmen locked out in British Columbia since April 28, will be voted on by both sides during the weekend. No details of the proposals were announced.

Connaghan told a news conference negotiations are continuing with about half a dozen unions represented in the dispute by the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council.

Fallers,

But the report of threats is only a small part of this story of a serious breach in the relationship between one faction of fallers and the officers of the IWA.

It involves in some quarters, the claim that striking fallers have been spurred by "reds" who were mixed up in an attempted breakaway from the union in 1948. And it also concerns the strong denial of the fallers that this is so, along with the accusation that some IWA officers are simply "red-baiters."

To understand it all, it is necessary to know something about the history of the fallers and their fight for a standard formula on an industry-wide basis.

Viala says the problem has been coming to a boil for the last two or three years. It is a complicated problem that saw piecework payment until 1954, when a system of base-rate was introduced. Since then the fallers have received the same increases on a yearly basis as others in the IWA — something that has meant a hike of $22 a day in that time.

Added to this is a sliding scale which had not found its way into a written agreement.

"In many cases the fallers were unable to make the sliding scale work," says Viala. "The problem was, there was no written formula, and the formula existed only in the mind of the bull-bucker." (The bull-bucker is a faller-foreman.)

The fallers want a system which would involve the same pricing throughout the industry, taking into account the type of trees, the terrain, and many other factors related to their work.

They also want protection against what they say is the practice of some bull-buckers to discriminate against any one faller, giving him poor trees to fall in dangerous areas. They say the fight is not one for money.

Viala says the demands were reintroduced into broad negotiations in the coast region this year. Prior to this the first phase — concerning pay for moving time and lost time — had been partially implemented in the industry. But there has been very little success with the second phase — an actual standard pricing formula.

Those backing the walkout say the union has let the demand sit for too long, and hasn't really tried to take up their case.

Thus, the walkout to get what they want and the decision, they say, to stay out until they win — even in the face of court action.

The walkout has caused a stoppage in the vital coast negotiations and is threatening to close the industry down bit by bit. Many operations have already closed.

The coast negotiations involve 30,000 IWA workers including the 800 fallers. A strike vote is being taken. The contract expires in 13 days.

The IWA attempted Monday to have fallers elected to an advisory committee at meetings of various locals, but in all but one case — at Haney — the meetings were disrupted and couldn't be completed.

The union blames the striking fallers, and the fallers say it was the fault of the union, that the meetings broke up in an ugly mood at Duncan, Port Alberni and Courtenay.

A report in some newspapers (not the Colonist) that this meant a split between the union and three locals on Vancouver Island has been strongly attacked by both

Fallers, Too, Divided in Union Fight

But the report of threats is only a small part of this story of a serious breach in the relationship between one faction of fallers and the officers of the IWA.

It involves in some quarters, the claim that striking fallers have been spurred by "reds" who were mixed up in an attempted breakaway from the union in 1948. And it also concerns the strong denial of the fallers that this is so, along with the accusation that some IWA officers are simply "red-baiters."

To understand it all, it is necessary to know something about the history of the fallers and their fight for a standard formula on an industry-wide basis.

Viala says the problem has been coming to a boil for the last two or three years. It is a complicated problem that saw piecework payment until 1954, when a system of base-rate was introduced. Since then the fallers have received the same increases on a yearly basis as others in the IWA — something that has meant a hike of $22 a day in that time.

Added to this is a sliding scale which had not found its way into a written agreement.

"In many cases the fallers were unable to make the sliding scale work," says Viala. "The problem was, there was no written formula, and the formula existed only in the mind of the bull-bucker." (The bull-bucker is a faller-foreman.)

The fallers want a system which would involve the same pricing throughout the industry, taking into account the type of trees, the terrain, and many other factors related to their work.

They also want protection against what they say is the practice of some bull-buckers to discriminate against any one faller, giving him poor trees to fall in dangerous areas. They say the fight is not one for money.

Viala says the demands were reintroduced into broad negotiations in the coast region this year. Prior to this the first phase — concerning pay for moving time and lost time — had been partially implemented in the industry. But there has been very little success with the second phase — an actual standard pricing formula.

Those backing the walkout say the union has let the demand sit for too long, and hasn't really tried to take up their case.

Thus, the walkout to get what they want and the decision, they say, to stay out until they win — even in the face of court action.

The walkout has caused a stoppage in the vital coast negotiations and is threatening to close the industry down bit by bit. Many operations have already closed.

The coast negotiations involve 30,000 IWA workers including the 800 fallers. A strike vote is being taken. The contract expires in 13 days.

The IWA attempted Monday to have fallers elected to an advisory committee at meetings of various locals, but in all but one case — at Haney — the meetings were disrupted and couldn't be completed.

The union blames the striking fallers, and the fallers say it was the fault of the union, that the meetings broke up in an ugly mood at Duncan, Port Alberni and Courtenay.

A report in some newspapers (not the Colonist) that this meant a split between the union and three locals on Vancouver Island has been strongly attacked by both sides. It meant a split — at least on a temporary basis — between the IWA and one group of fallers.

Just how big this group of fallers is seems to be a matter of whom you are talking to and at what time.

The four fallers who gathered Thursday at Walter Erickson's home in Lake Cowichan say the walkout has the support of nearly all the fallers. Viala and his officers say most fallers would vote to return to work if they were given the chance to do so through a secret ballot.

The fight against a secret ballot was behind this disruption of the meetings, they say.

The fallers said they already had their own 17-man steering committee and had decided they didn't want to go back to work. So there was no need for another committee.

Some IWA soources say they believe the striking fallers are doing one of two things:

- Attempting to disrupt coast negotiations and close the industry down.
- Hoping to break away from the IWA and form their own union.

The fallers say there is no truth at all to either point.

Now, for the other side:

The four fallers up at Walter Erickson's place say their union negotiators have never come out with a pricing formula on their behalf.

Jim Eddy, who is on the 17-man steering committee, says the proposals put forward on behalf of the fallers in 1970 aren't acceptable to the companies.

They all agree that 800 fallers would have no say in their destiny if a package with bad fallers' rates was put before the coast membership of 30,000.

Jubenville is the only former faller on the 11-man negotiating committee, but they say he has not backed their cause.

Jubenville has remained silent.

The four fallers say they think he might be beaten when the Duncan local holds its elections in October.

Says Eddy: "I've got an old beagle dog at home who could beat him right now."

Of the innuendos suggesting communism Eddy says, "I heard one guy say 'I'd rather be a little pink than yellow.' "

To which Olson adds: "Any guy who opposes Jubenville is accused of being a red."

The four of them say the fallers definitely want to remain in the IWA.

"Our union is only as good as we make it, and we want to make it strong. So there is no sense in weakening it by breaking away," says Eddy.

Olson, who the others refer to as a respected Lake Cowichan businessman (he owns a resort down the road a piece) says, "My dad was a good IWA man and I want to be the same.

"I look at those young fellows out there," he says, pointing in the general direction of the forest, "and I think that what we are doing now is for them — some of us don't have far to go, and we won't really benefit."

One of the four men — who for personal reasons does not want to be identified, says: "The industry is trying to get across to the public that we are wealthy fallers and that we want more money. That isn't it. What we want is equality. We don't want the sick and the loudmouth to make it all."

This was a reference to their claim that certain men win the favoritism of the bull-buckers.

To all of this, Erickson adds: "In all segments of society there are people who speak out for what they believe. Some are called fighters, which is an acceptable term. Others fight just as hard, but somehow become known as radicals.

"I differ with that. They are but people who beliefs are stronger than others and who express those beliefs. Without such people we might never have become a civilization, if we may be so bold as to call ourselves that."

Arabs

Troops, policemen and other security forces swarmed over the airport, ambulances were summoned and hospitals placed on standby. Even Israeli newsmen regularly stationed at the airport were ordered out of their offices and the terminal.

Precautions were taken with planes and some travellers said Asians were separated from other passengers for special attention.

Jordan's King Hussein denounced the attack by the gunmen said to be agents of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine which has its headquarters in Beirut.

"It's a sick crime, committed by sick people and planned by sick minds," Hussein said in Amman. "It has nothing to do with the Arab world, the people of Palestine or with our nature in any way or form — we condemn it and we regret it very, very deeply."

The only other official Arab denunciation thus far came from Lebanon, which Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said must share responsibility. Foreign Minister Khalil Aby Hamad said in Beirut "Lebanon condemns every action regardless of its nature and its source, that may harm innocent civilians and outsiders."

Egyptian Prime Minister Aziz Sidky, speaking on Cairo Radio, said the attack on the Tel Aviv airport "indicates we are capable of achieving victory in our battle against Israel." He said "this operation" had shattered the myth of Israeli supremacy.

In Beirut, a PFLP spokesman said, "we will continue our operations and we will escalate them. We will continue to carry out operations in the occupied territories . . . and elsewhere which the PFLP considers suitable to hit the interest of the enemy."

The front already has warned tourists to Israel that the guerrillas "will not be responsible for their safety in a land which we consider the field of a continuing battle."

Lawyers Balk At Retraining

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Lawyers from B.C. and Alberta Thursday balked at the suggestion they be required to participate in compulsory retraining and displayed sharp differences on the subject of specialization within the profession.

With City

By HUBERT BEYER

"It's absurd . . . it's preposterous . . ."

That was Victoria's Mayor Peter Pollen commenting Thursday on a suggestion made a few minutes earlier by Toronto architect Harry Kohl that the city buy all property in the Old Town area, then re-develop the downtown waterfront sector as it wished.

"To suggest that we spend $100 million to control development in Old Town" didn't make sense, Pollen said.

The discussion was one of many which turned the usually quiet and subdued atmosphere of the theatre into a series of lively scenes.

The occasion: A design game aimed at producing an "instant development plan" for Old Town, the area between Government and Wharf, Fisgard and the Causeway.

The players: Six teams of architects from across Canada attending the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada's annual convention.

The rules: Each team pursued its plans on a different basis and philosophy, ranging all the way from complete government expropriation of the area's property to letting present decay take its natural course.

Models Built

Groups of architects were huddling in corners, discussing their specific tasks; others were furiously drawing plans; high school students taking part in one team effort, made their views known on what Old Town should be like. Models were constructed, torn apart and reconstructed.

Kohl of Toronto insisted the city should only exercise control over the area if it owned the property. But he modified his plan by limiting the land to be expropriated to the waterfront.

"Where is the morality if you impose your restrictions on the land owner?" Kohl asked.

Stanley King of Vancouver said any redevelopment of Old Town must be undertaken slowly. No plan should be superimposed by planners and architects. Residents must be asked what environment they wish to live in.

Bird Sounds

King was working with a team of architects and several high school students. Here are a few of the points which the students said should be considered:

He said it should be a "fun place" where people like to go. He suggested that a "little choo-choo" run along the waterfront, transporting people to various attractions.

Hamilton called for a master plan that should define the height of buildings, the location of parking areas, pedestrian movement and waterfront walkways.

He warned that too much planning might play havoc with the desired results. Europe's most beautiful cities had evolved without long-range plans and restrictions.

Peter Hemingway of Edmonton said he had inspected the Old Town area and had "come away angry."

Low Scale

Developers should be given tax incentives. Traffic in the area should be "eliminated to a large extent." Densities of buildings should be increased to create a "busy alive redevelopment of Old Town."

Gordon Atkins of Calgary advocated an intricate pattern of pedestrian movement at different levels throughout Old Town. Promenades should be built; new buildings should be on a low scale; good quality buildings should be retained.

The sixth team, led by Joseph Baker of Montreal dropped out of the game after the terms of reference were set. Baker insisted that there was no real problem in Old Town.

What was the "plan-in" good for? Were there any tangible results?

Not really, according to Sam Bawlf, Victoria developer and restorer of historic buildings to contemporary use.

"The results aren't really so important. The main thing is that here we have, probably for the first time, a dialogue between experts and interested citizens. This sort of forum should be held on a continuous basis," Bawlf said.

'Cynic's' Offer

Highflying Solution

Montreal architect Joseph Baker, referred to by some of his colleagues as "the ultimate radical cynic" offered his own tongue-in-cheek solution Thursday to the problem of redeveloping Victoria's Old Town.

Because Old Town would "always be a problem," Baker suggested that the entire area be levelled and a 105-storey building be erected in the centre.

Developing his theme, which in a later interview he called "a joke born out of utter frustration and sadness," the architect said:

"Just to show you that we are sociologically responsible, we'll put alll the physically-handicapped in the 105th floor; elevators will be installed at a later date."

Senior citizens, he mused, could be accommodated on the 104th floor "where they wouldn't get in the way."

Baker
. . . out of sadness

Further down, there would be provision for public housing, the Chinese community, English Canadians and commercial space. Ethnic groups could also find room in the building, Baker theorized.

"The building would be sufficient to accommodate all of Old Town's population."

The rest of the area, he offered, could be blacktopped. If that wasn't enough parking space, the Inner Harbor could be filled with garbage and also be blacktopped.

In this fashion, he explained, Victoria could solve its constant waterfront dispute and also pioneer a unique land-fill project.

He told fellow architects, in Victoria to attend the annual convention of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, they are "self-centred opportunists." Instead of solving the real problems of big Canadian cities, in Victoria they were going through a ritual of redesigning a part of a city that didn't have any real problems.

Some of them, including a number of architects, rose to denounce Baker. They called him paranoic and destructive. They accused him of tearing down without offering alternatives himself.

Baker, 43, teaches architecture at McGill University, Montreal. In an interview later, he said the proceedings at the theatre made him very sad.

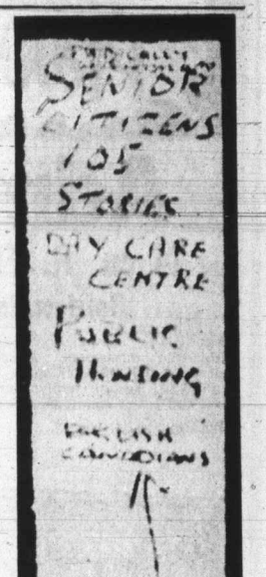

"They come in here to conduct a half-day design blitz knowing absolutely nothing about the city, the people, their dreams and wishes."

While Toronto, Montreal and other cities were having real problems like housing shortage, the architects were playing games in Victoria, a city that didn't have any problem; Baker said.

"Architects should act as informed citizens. Instead of going through the role of providing stereotyped development plans, they should concern themselves with problems like housing and transportation."

Instead of selling out to clients, often against their better judgement, architects should work for the real clients — the people.

The design game, aimed at producing a variety of redevelopment plans for Old Town, was a waste of time. So, he said, was the entire convention.

Mandatory Under New Law

Judge Ceases Suspensions

Robinson
. . . little purpose

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

Victoria traffic court Judge E. F. N. Robinson stopped giving licence suspensions Thursday as the B.C. government's new system of mandatory suspensions for convicted impaired drivers went into effect.

Robinson explained in an interview outside Victoria Provincial Court's traffic section he felt the legislation had left the matter of licence prohibitions in the hands of the Motor Vehicles Branch superintendent.

Therefore, he said, "my feeling is there would be little purpose in my questioning" a driver on whether the licence was needed.

Motor Vehicles Act amendments passed last spring by the Legislature provide an automatic one-month licence suspension as of Thursday for a first offence of impaired driving, driving with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent or failing to take a breath-analysis test.

They also provide suspensions for six months or possibly more for second or subsequent similar offences within five years, with the superintendent making the decision on length of suspension.

Robinson said he had "given the matter considerable thought" and added his feeling the Legislature had left prohibitions entirely up to the superintendent was based on both the mandatory suspensions and the fact the superintendent also can "restrict the validity of the licence to certain hours and purposes."

"These powers for the superintendent "made me feel there would be little purpose in my questioning a man with respect to occupation and so on to find out whether he needed his licence."

The judge, who handles most of the drinking-driving cases to come before the three-section court, imposed fines in the usual $300 to $400 range on five such cases to come before him Thursday morning.

Other court sources said it was possible the new mandatory one-month suspension for a first offender could work to the driver's advantage. In some courts, including the one where Robinson presides, the usual driving ban for first offenders has been three or four months.

Some judges were said to feel the superintendent might add a mandatory suspension if they ordered suspensions on their own, so their decision may be to follow the new law and let the superintendent take over the job in full.

Condition Fair

Robert Alcock, 19, of 76 Hampton, Saanich, was reported in fair condition Thursday night at Royal Jubilee Hospital with head injuries received Wednesday night in a bicycle accident. Victoria police said that Alcock's bicycle, a 10-speed, was in collision with a bicycle driven by Douglas Carswell, 18, of 2885 Parkview Drive, Saanich, at the southwest corner of Woodward's parking lot.

Gati Is Undaunted By City Turndown

Victoria Symphony Orchestra conductor Laszlo Gati is somewhat disappointed, but far from dispirited, over Victoria city hall's rejection Thursday of his proposal for summer concerts in Centennial Square.

"This is just the beginning, not the end," he said, "of a plan that could expand Victoria's tourist season and build up the cultural interests of its residents."

City council earlier in the day shot down Gati's effort to win permission to stage open-air concerts in Centennial Square during the summer months.

Aldermen said they liked the idea, but they gave the following reasons for turning down Gati's request:

- Ald. Ove Witt — "This is going to cost a lot of dough. It's a very costly affair. It would also conflict with parking arrangements we have with the MacPherson Theatre."
- Ald. Harold Olafson — "I don't see how we can close a public square for two hours every day during a seven-week period."
- Ald. Alf Hood — "I think it's physically not feasible to provide 2,000 chairs in time for the summer season, rope off the square etc. on such short notice."

Gati
. . . just beginning

Gati proposed a series of concerts — a Sunset Promenade — from 6 p.m. to 7:15 p.m. in Centennial Square. He was asking council's finance committee for a grant to get started, and for the use of 2,000 chairs to be set out for the audience.

Admission would be $2 for reserved seats, $1 for the others. Half-price season tickets would be available, "and of course fringe area standing room would be free and unlimited — the more the better."

Gati earlier had been turned down by the provincial government in a bid to stage these concerts in Heritage Court, by the museum. The difficulties in closing off the necessary space in order to charge admission was a factor in that case.

"I believe we've at least started the thinking process in both municipal and provincial governments," Gati said Thursday evening.

"Concerts such as these, embodying symphonic, ballet and light opera music, and even jazz, would be a great attraction for tourists and a boon to the city's cultural life."

Gati envisioned the project as self-supporting, with a good chance that initial get-started grants could be repaid the first year.

There will be two free concerts this summer by Victoria's symphony orchestra, although the location has yet to be pinned down. These are made possible through sponsorship of the recording industries trust fund of the musicians' union.

Meanwhile, Gati is beginning his plans for the summer of 1973.

Ready To Bargain

Fallers Choose Team

Fallers engaged in a wildcat strike against the British Columbia coast forest industry Wednesday elected six men to represent them at the bargaining table once master contract negotiations resume.

The 800 striking fallers have been off the job since mid-April in an attempt to get a standard pricing formula. The walkout has blocked master contract negotiations affecting 28,000 woodworkers on the B.C. coast.

An attempt by the regional council of the International Woodworkers of America to have bargainers elected last weekend backfired when Vancouver Island fallers refused to participate. They protested the presence at meetings in the logging camps of fallers who have continued to work.

On Wednesday, about 30 fallers met at a downtown Vancouver hotel and chose six men to speak for the six union locals representing fallers.

Spokesman Chuck Evans said the fallers also elected two other representatives from each of the six locals in case they are needed in the negotiations.

However, Evans said the fallers' steering committee still has not had any direct contact with the 11-man negotiating team of the IWA.

The current IWA contract expires June 15 and the union has demanded an across-the-board increase of $1 an hour plus improved fringe benefits. The forest companies, represented in bargaining by Forest Industrial Relations Ltd., has not yet made a counter-offer.

Labor Minister James Chabot indicated Wednesday he will make an announcement this week regarding the stalled negotiations.

He said the IWA and F.I.R. are reviewing his proposal that a joint committee be established to look into the fallers' dispute. Chabot has suggested the fallers' dispute is the key problem blocking master negotiations.

Home on Tour

Maclure Touch Reigns Serene

By DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI
Colonist Staff

The home of Mrs. J. Carl Pendray at 2391 Beach Drive will be among four to be opened to the public for the House Tour sponsored by the women's committee to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria on Saturday afternoon.

The first tour bus will leave the art gallery on Moss Street at 1:30 p.m. and will continue at 15 minute intervals until 2:30 p.m.

Many features in this beautiful home are typically Maclure. The open central space for which he was well known is strong in this house. The staircase leading from the central hall opens into a gallery which runs around the upper floor. It has some beautiful carving.

In this hall there is a chair worthy of note. It is Chinese with inlay of mother of pearl and a marble seat. There are a number of Chinese chests and cabinets, all brought back by the Pendrays from trips to the Orient. The huge brass chandelier is the original and typical of the period.

The drawing room is interesting because it is a double room with a large window between the two. There is a beautiful view as there is from all other rooms facing out over the water. The fireplace is of marble and the original ceiling is intact as are the lighting fixtures which were specially made for the house.

A pair of French jars, decorated in gold leaf, stand beside the fireplace and the jar on the grand piano was painted in 1907 by Eva McLaren, Mrs. Pendray's sister.

The long slim windows at the top of the stairway still have the original leaded glass but many of the view windows have been replaced by large modern plate glass.

Mrs. J. Carl Pendray, left, Mrs. Don Telford, in dining room

The paneled dining room has beautiful plaster moldings in a grape design which is repeated in the carving on the fireplace tiles. A large crystal chandelier hangs from the ceiling. A china tea set here belonged to Mrs. Pendray's great grandmother.

The master bedroom on the second storey has its own roofed in veranda and an adjoining dressing room. Walls are done in the palest of pinks showing up the mauve tiling around the fireplace.

The bathroom for this bedroom has a deep marble tub and large marble basin.

Another large bedroom with a fireplace has a sweeping view of the sea. The housekeeper's suite completes the upper floor.

Disease Expert Warns:

Budgies Cause Fibrosis

VANCOUVER (CP) — The budgie bird can be a poential and serious health hazard, a British professor of immunology warned Tuesday.

Dr. Jack Pepys of London's Brompton Institute of Diseases of the Chest, said it is not the individual with hayfever or obvious asthmatic-type allergies who is threatened by the budgie.

"Rather it is the owner who is seemingly free of allergies who may develop fibrosis of the lung," he said in an interview.

"It's an insidious thing that creeps up on you and you may not suspect you are developing the condition until you begin to feel short of breath (without wheezing) and are at a loss to explain why."

Fibrosis is the formation of fibros tissue resulting in the narrowing or closure of minute arteries and capillaries.

"It's not the feathers which precipitate the condition but the dust which comes from dry bird droppings," Dr. Pepys said.

Loyalty to Queen Best Safeguard?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Delegates reaffirmed their loyalty Wednesday to the Crown in Canada during the 72nd annual convention of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire (IODE).

Mrs. W. R. Morrison of Hamilton, chairman of the Crown in Canada committee, said she is not a militant royalist.

"I am simply a Canadian who holds an unshakeable belief in Canada with the Queen as head of state," she said. "So long as this situation remains, Canada cannot become a republic or a dictatorship."

Mrs. Morrison urged provincial IODE chapters to establish Crown in Canada committees, and called upon members to write to their MPs affirming their loyalty to the Queen. The IODE also encourages its members to belong to the Monarchist League of Canada.

"We mourn the death of the Duke of Windsor," Mrs. Morrison said. "When he abdicated the throne we used the terms Mother Country and British Empire. We don't use these words anymore. But we must persist in our efforts to be knowledgeable about the monarchy parliament and Canada. We must guard and cherish the traditions we value. That's why we have the Crown in Canada committee."

She said plans are well organized for the 75th anniversary meeting of the IODE, to be held in Fredericton, N.B., in 1975. The order was formed in Fredericton.

An invitation will be sent to the Queen or another member of the Royal Family to attend the Fredericton gathering.

Elected IODE national president for 1972-73 was Mrs. K. J. C. Dean of Toronto. Provincial presidents, who are also national vice-presidents, are Mrs. F. A. Lynds of Moncton, Mrs. Peebles Kelly of Winnipeg, Mrs. Nickolas Kalyk of Burnaby, B.C., Mrs. L. O. Robinson of Regina, Mrs. E. F. MacKay of Hamilton, Mrs. I. F. Willan of Edmonton, Mrs. M. M. Rankin of Halifax, Mrs. J. H. Gibbs of Montreal and Mrs. D. G. MacMillan of Charlottetown.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Latin may be dead in most places but it was thriving at South Secondary School Wednesday when 150 students held a Roman feast complete with vestal virgins, gladiators, dancing girls, a Syrian band and sacrificial chicken.

"The purpose of the feast is to have fun and learn something about the Romans and their customs," Joanne Mayhew, Latin department chairman and organizer of the feast, said.

"The students make their own costumes and naturally have had to research many aspects of Roman life.

The feast was a project of the Grade 13 class but any student in the school could help.

One of the biggest problems was ordering authentic food through the school's catering service.

Finally they settled on salad with oil and vinegar dressings, chicken, hot bread, melons, grapes and nuts — all foods the Romans could have eaten.

Before the feast began a chicken was "sacrificed" to the gods to ensure a successful feast.

"This is really a fantastic experience and I've gotten a lot out of it," said Dayle Evans, 16, one of the vestal virgins.

"We researched the Roman religious customs and found out that they used grain to sprinkle on the chicken before killing it. We use bread crumbs and don't kill the chicken, though."

'Ombudservice' To Probe Status

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

The Victorian Status of Women Action Group has decided to open an "ombudservice" to investigate cases of discrimination on the basis of sex or marital status, president Kathleen Ruff reported Wednesday.

She said the decision had been made after reviewing information given to members of the group of alleged discrimination which to date has not been acted upon.

The group, she said, is collecting information on existing legislation which already exists to protect women from discrimination.

"However," said Mrs. Ruff, "women are not often aware of their rights and all the fine legislation in the world is useless if not put into practice."

"We found an example of this recently when SWAG conducted a survey of retail stores and found that women who needed time off for childbirth were losing their jobs. Such dismissal is prohibited by the B.C. Maternity Leave Act which requires that a woman's job be held open for her for a specified period of maternity leave."

Mrs. Ruff said many changes have recently been made in federal legislation ensuring women of equal rights in such fields as pay, promotion, training programs and credit regulations.

"Such changes in legislation are often not widely understood and it will be SWAG's aim to collect and explain all relevant, up-to-date information."

Another purpose of the service, Mrs. Ruff explained, will be to help and support women who want to take action under the law.

"Many women fear that they are exposing themselves to reprisals should they speak out," she said. "They do not have confidence in the law to protect them."

"If a case is justified we will stand behind them to be sure they are not victimized.

"If it's a local issue we're right on hand to speak out and support them — if it concerns a national organization we can call on the support of women's groups across the country. Only by women working together and standing by one another will any change ever be brought about."

"Our third purpose," she said, "will be to encourage women who have docilely bowed down to inferior status as an inevitable fact of life to stand up and challenge it.

"In the past any women who questioned the status quo have been picked off one by one.

"The few token women who have succeeded have frequently closed their eyes, ears and hearts as to what was the general bleak outlook for the majority of women.

"We feel, however, that the climate of opinion has changed and people are no longer ready to tolerate antiquated prejudiced concepts of women as substandard males."

Mrs. Ruff said tactics used by the service will range from quiet diplomatic persuasion to outright protest and picketing if necessary.

Help and information is available at 598-1390 or 477-3549.

Steven's chickenpox two weeks ago turned into Reyes' Syndrome, a rare disease which blocks off the liver, leading to poisoning, coma and death.

The children's orthopedic hospital mustered everything it knew. At least 70 men who work with Steven's father, Daniel, at Boeing, showed up at the blood bank.

Doctors removed all of Steven's 2½ quarts of blood three times. They fed him through a vein, gave him cortisone and other medicines and kept him in a cooling blanket against high fever. Through a hole in his abdomen, an apparatus performed a chemical "washing" or kidneys, sluicing impurities away.

University Committee Formed

Weaning from U.S. Sought

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Sociology and Anthropology Association Tuesday night set up two committees to deal with what it says is increasing U.S. influence in Canadian universities and studies.

The committees hope to find ways to encourage Canadian content and methodology in Canadian universities as well as establishing guidelines giving Canadians priority in future university appointments.

The motion setting up the committees was based on a brief presented to the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada recently by a committee of seven representing sociological and anthropological disciples.

The motion was adopted by the 14-member executive committee of the CSAA and approved by the association's membership Tuesday night.

"The problem of Canadianization is tied in with the broader problem of establishing a distinctive Canadian identity," said David Schweitzer of the University of British Columbia, one of the brief's authors.

"We need to develop a distinctive Canadian approach to the problem of anthropology and sociology, by involving more Canadian issues and by increasing the influences in Canada from many varied historical approaches."

The Canadianization subcommittee was established to a set of intermediate measures to deal with the problem at the December meeting of the association's executive and also to generate guidelines and draft solutions to the problem on a wider scale.

The Canadian studies subcommittee will deal with publication of a comprehensive guide to Canadian departments of anthropology and sociology, museums and government agencies, with information on faculty, specializations and degrees offered, the approximate number of faculty to be hired and the levels of appointment and area of specialization.

Indian Handiwork Marketing Might Be Funded Federally

VANCOUVER (CP) — A conference of the British Columbia Indian Homemakers' Association was told Wednesday that Indians are getting their own Opportunities for Youth program.

Indian affairs department spokesman Wayne Ready told about 50 women that the federal government has committed $2 million over the next six years to help B.C. Indians manufacture and market Indian handiwork.

Money will be awarded to the best proposals from across the province, he said. All operations must become viable business enterprises within three years.

"It's possible to get 80 per cent financial support from the department," he told the conference, meeting at the University of B.C.

"But at least 20 per cent must come from other sources available to the band or the individual," he added. "After the six year period there will be a minimum of nine Indian production centres that will continue to operate as independent businesses."

The screening of applications and administration will be done jointly by the department and the Indians. Ready assured the conference the program would not be implemented until fully approved by the Indians.

He said he began bringing the program to their attention last March when he presented it to the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, which is still studying the program.

He later estimated the program could find jobs for as many as 3,000 Indians after six years.

U.S. Presses Deadline To Safeguard Nighties

WASHINGTON (CP) — Rejecting industry pleas for delay, the U.S. government is ordering manufacturers to make small children's sleepwear fire-resistant.

Commerce Secretary Peter Peterson told reporters Wednesday the first phase of the flammability standard, covering sizes 0 to 6X, will go into effect July 29.

After that date, children's sleepwear must be resistant to flame or the government will label the garments flammable and place a warning on the clothing.

A year later, all sleeping garments in sizes 0 to 6X must meet the standard or be banned from the market.

Peterson also announced that a flammability standard covering new mattresses will become effective next year. Under that standard, mattresses must be able to resist the fire of 18 burning cigarettes without bursting into flames.

Peterson said the department is recommending a home technique for flame-proofing cotton fabrics. It requires a solution of ont cup of borax, one-half cup of boric acid and two quarts of hot water, sprayed or sprinkled on a garment after each wash.

Waterbed In Use For Easier Birth

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — A waterbed is in use at the Valley Medical Center to help women during labor.

"And we haven't had any trouble in getting women to use it," Dr. Robert Goodlin, associate director of obstetrics at the hospital, said Wednesday.

Goodlin said the use of waterbeds in hospitals is nothing new. They have been used for burn patients as well as for long-term patients with bed sores.

Dr. Ernest Lowe, director of obstetrics, said the use of the waterbed for pregnant women resembles the European method for enduring labor. The European position is on the side and curled up in a posture resembling the fetal position, Lowe said.

The American method, he said, "horrifies foreign obstetricians" and finds women going to labor on their backs.

The doctor said the European method is more comfortable for many women and gives them a better chance for an easy labor. The waterbed, he said, allows women to 'cuddle' down into its warmth and float to ease the pain.

Students Have Orgy of Latin

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Latin may be dead in most places but it was thriving at South Secondary School Wednesday when 150 students held a Roman feast complete with vestal virgins, gladiators, dancing girls, a Syrian band and sacrificial chicken.

"The purpose of the feast is to have fun and learn something about the Romans and their customs," Joanne Mayhew, Latin department chairman and organizer of the feast, said.

"The students make their own costumes and naturally have had to research many aspects of Roman life.

The feast was a project of the Grade 13 class but any student in the school could help.

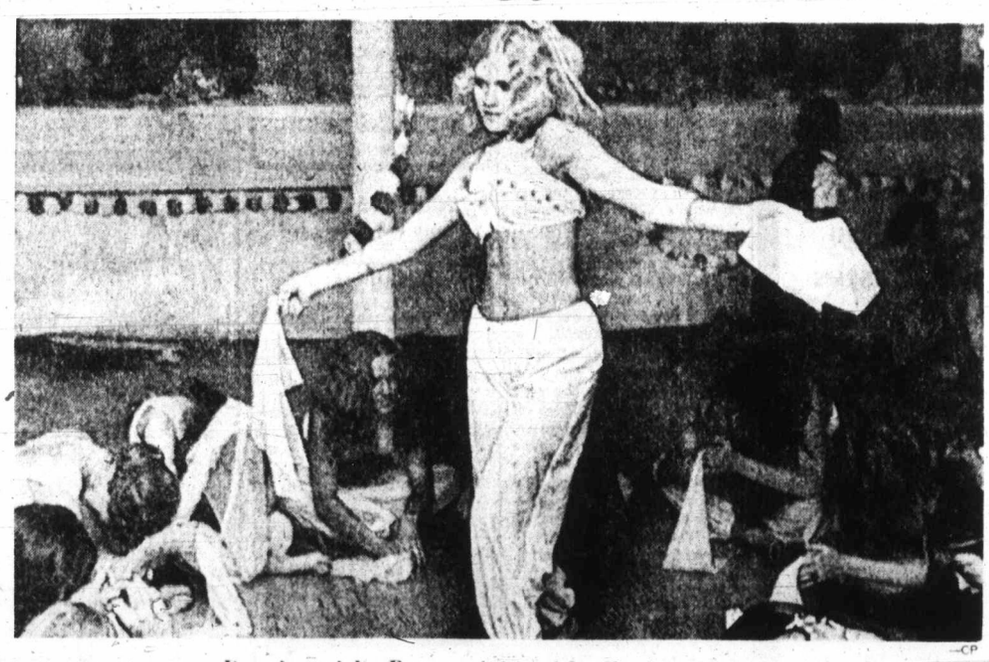

One of the biggest problems was ordering authentic food through the school's catering service.

Finally they settled on salad with oil and vinegar dressings, chicken, hot bread, melons, grapes and nuts — all foods the Romans could have eaten.

Before the feast began a chicken was "sacrificed" to the gods to ensure a successful feast.

"This is really a fantastic experience and I've gotten a lot out of it," said Dayle Evans, 16, one of the vestal virgins.

"We researched the Roman religious customs and found out that they used grain to sprinkle on the chicken before killing it. We use bread crumbs and don't kill the chicken, though."

Star Is Born

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — Susan Mary Rose became Britain's — and probably the world's — youngest radio personality Sunday, the day after she was born.

Her mother, Dr. Jocelyn Rose, 35, recorded a running commentary as she gave birth to nine-pound, seven-ounce Susan Mary for broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC).

Susan Mary's first cries climaxed the broadcast.

Dr. Rose, already a mother of four, said she agreed to the public airing of Susan Mary's arrival "to dispel some of the horrific old wives' tales about childbirth."

In Language, Anyway

Sex Parity Just Token

MONTREAL (CP) — Many persons pay lip service to the principle that woman is equal to man — then they unwittingly deny it every second time they open their mouths to speak.

That seemed to be the message of Prof. Bernard Saint-Jacques of the University of British Columbia, who addressed the Canadian Linguistic Association at the annual conference of Learned Societies, which goes into its second day today at McGill University.

In an address entitled "Sex, dependency and language," Prof. Saint-Jacques said Mankind is familiar with two languages — one for men and one for women, the second carrying a connotation of dependency.

He cited examples from the highly-stylized Japanese language and declared:

"In other words, the linguistic universe of the Japanese is constituted by his relationships to others; that is, the rank he occupies in the social group, be it superior, inferior or equal . . . Sex is one basic point of reference. The common concept underlying these various points of reference is the fundamental idea of dependency; for instance, the child on the parents, the poor on the rich.

The relation male-female is also essentially a matter of dependency; the female is considered as depending on the male for her own identity and existence, and as such inferior in the social scale of value, and hence clearly marked in the system of speech levels.

"It seems that the same concept of dependency is also an operative factor in other languages, underlying for instance socio-linguistic distinctions based on sex. These distinctions, although more subtle and less pronounced, certainly exist in the linguistic universe of speakers of French and English, and they manifest the same underlying concept of dependency."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our next-door neighbor bought a darling little puppy for their children. Sounds sweet? Well, the children are four and five years of age and they treat the puppy as if it were a stuffed animal. In fact, I am not at all sure they know the difference.

A few days ago I saw the youngest child squeeze the puppy so hard I thought he had killed it. I rushed over and took the pathetic creature out of the youngster's hands. Then I went immediately to the child's mother and told her what had happened. Her response infuriated me. "Oh, Donnie didn't mean to hurt the puppy," she yawned. "He just loves that little doggie to death." I told her she didn't realize how close her language had come to the truth.

Yesterday the five-year-old had the pet in the backyard. He was dressing the puppy in doll's clothes. The skirt was so tight that the puppy was crying in agony. The child had put a hat on the puppy's head and the elastic chinstrap was choking him. Again I went to the mother and complained. This time she got mad and told me she was sick of my interference and to mind my own business.

I want to help that little animal but I don't know what to do next. My husband says he doesn't want me getting into fights with the neighbors —that I have made two attempts and now I should keep quiet. What do you say? — Hate To See It.

Dear See: Tell that dumbbell next door that if you witness another act of cruelty against that helpless puppy you are going to call the SPCA. Then do it.

Dear Ann Landers: Do I have a right to an explanation? If you say no, I promise to keep my mouth shut. If you say yes, I'll show it to my daughter-in-law and tell her to start talking because Ann is on my side.

Last night my son and his wife were playing three-handed bridge. About midnight a car pulled into the driveway and just stood there. I recognized it at once as my ex-husband's Chevrolet Impala. My son went out to the car and stayed 10 minutes. He came back and said, "Dad has had a little too much to drink. He doesn't want to come in. He just wants to sit out there and listen to the radio."

With that my daughter-in-law excused herself and went out to the car. She was gone nearly an hour. This, of course, ruined our card game. But worse than that I drove myself nuts trying to figure out what those two were talking about. When my daughter-in-law came back in the house she didn't say one word to explain her lengthy absence. She and my son left shortly after and I've been boiling ever since.

I feel my daughter-in-law owes it to me to tell me what they talked about. When I asked my son if she had told him he replied, "No, I figured it was none of my business." What do you think about it, Ann? — Blacked Out.

Dear Out: Since your daughter-in-law did not volunteer any information, accept the fact that she is keeping a confidence. Respect her integrity and stop probing.

Parole Officer Porno Producer?

CINCINNATI (UPI) — An Ohio probation officer was indicted by a county grand jury Friday on charges of filming teenage girls in pornographic movies.

According to prosecutors, John Richert, 44, used girls as young as 13 in a series of movies he made in an apartment.

Richert, a resident of suburban Madison, Ind., was charged with taking indecent liberties with a 13-year-old girl, presenting obscene performances to several other teenage girls, and enticing 13- and 14-year-old girls with "intent to take indecent and improper liberties."

The girls were paid by Richert from $5 to $25 for their participation, prosecutors charged.

Ballet Storms Stuttgart

STUTTGART (CP) — Twelve curtain calls and a 10-minute standing ovation heralded the National Ballet of Canada in this West German city Tuesday night.

The 82-member troupe, on an eight-week European tour, appeared for one night only at the famed Stuttgart Opera House, home of the internationally-known Stuttgart Ballet.

J. Crean, Canadian ambassador to Germany, was host at a reception for the Canadians, attended by 400 persons, including the mayor of Stuttgart.

The National Ballet appeared here as part of a special Canada Week in Stuttgart, sponsored by the Canadian government.

The morning paper Stuttgarter Seitung praised the company for its style of dancing and its youthful vigor and technique. The company presented two ballets on one program, La Sylphide and Intermezzo.

The National Ballet tour continues to Paris, where it opens a one-week engagement June 5 then goes to Brussels, Glasgow, Lausanne and Monte Carlo.

IRA Leader Arrested In Ulster Crackdown

DUBLIN (AP) — Joe Cahill, a leader of the Irish Republican Army's terrorist campaign in Northern Ireland, was held in custody here Thursday in the first real crackdown on militant leaders in the Republic of Ireland during the last three years of violence.

A special court ordered Cahill held at least until Tuesday on charges of being a member of an illegal organization. He can then be ordered by the court to be kept in custody longer.

Although the IRA is officially outlawed, Cahill has operated freely in the republic since August, when he fled Belfast, the Northern Ireland capital, to avoid internment by the British army.

He was arrested Wednesday in a swoop by republican authorities that marked a major policy shift in Dublin and could be a key step in the efforts to bring peace to troubled Northern Ireland.

Food Profiteering—NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democratic MPs charged Thursday that large chains of supermarkets that control most of the food marketing in Canada are milking the farmers and cheating the consumers.

Grace MacInnis of Vancouver-Kingsway made the charge as she moved a want-of-confidence motion in the government for not coping with steadily rising food prices.

The motion linked increases in food prices with the "unprecedented rate" of increase in supermarket profits and called for investigation of both by a parliamentary committee which would report back by June 26.

Minister of State Pat Mahoney (Calgary South), lead government speaker in the one-day debate, said the motion was "cleverly worded" but that its premises do not stand up.

Supermarket chains are not profiteering, he said. An analysis of food costs showed that recent raises merely bring food costs back to a stable level following a substantial drop in late 1970 and early 1971 resulting from a supermarket price war.

"The government has no reason to believe they've been treating consumers unfairly."

The combines investigations branch, a body to guard against monopolies in business and other things, maintains a "watching brief" over food prices charged by supermarket chains, he said.

New Democrats complained during the supermarket food price war that smaller food retailers were being driven out of business.

A Conservative amendment to the motion, which would have deleted the reference to supermarket prices and referred the matter to the prices and incomes commission, was ruled out of order.

Mrs. MacInnis reiterated a point she has made several times at this session of Parliament: Food prices for the year ending April were up 7½ per cent while supermarket profits were up as much as 300 oer cent in the first quarter of this year.

She quoted a recent study by Gary Rush, an associated professor of Simon Fraser University in Vancouver, saying a few major food chains control the whole grocery-selling business.

Car Insurance Watchdog:

Rate Hikes Approved Are Not Excessive

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. J. F. K. English, chairman of the B.C. Automobile Insurance Board, said Wednesday that new car insurance rates due to take effect July 1 were approved because they are not excessive.

English said the proposed increases would have been subjected to a public hearing if they had exceeded the board's guidelines for increases.

He said some of the new rates applied for were questioned by the board and the applicants reduced them when requested to do so. Asked why the board would not hold public hearings into the rate increases anyway, English said the public "is not in a position to know whether these rates are justified."

He said the public interest is protected by the board, which has access to information which permits it to determine the need for rate boosts on the basis of "the number of accidents and repair costs and so on."

Neither English nor board secretary Bud Day would issue details of the guidelines because they said this would permit insurance companies to know what maximums they would be allowed to charge.

Insurance industry spokesmen said the average increase for the average driver would be roughly 8 per cent.

'B.C. Accomplice In Public Gouge'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor Wednesday called for immediate action to provide government-operated car insurance.

"Our federation has repeatedly called upon the provincial government to provide low-cost government car insurance similar to either the Saskatchewan or Manitoba plans," Secretary-Treasurer Ray Haynes said in a statement.

"Even a former insurance official who bitterly opposed introduction of a government plan recently acknowledged that the government plan is working and has reduced auto insurance costs.

"The announced eight-per-cent projected rate increase in B.C. makes government action imperative. When car insurance was made mandatory in B.C., we warned against leaving it in private hands and predicted that the public would be gouged.

"The gouging is going on more each year. How long can the government be an accomplice to this highway robbery?"

Viet Protesters Cripple Planes

Window Boxes

At one time, no home would have been considered fashionably decorated without its wooden window boxes mounted on the outer sills of the front windows. Some homes — circa 1910 — even had upstairs window boxes, which must have been quite a headache to keep watered.

Then, for a time, the window box went out of fashion, along with the scrolls and curlicues and other fancy adornments. Today, though, it is making a strong comeback, along with its modern counterpart, the permanent brick planter.

One question I am often asked is whether or not such a brick planter should have a concrete "floor" or bottom to it. I am very much against, such a floor, for good drainage is all-important if the soil is not to become waterlogged and stagnant. I think it is best to break up the soil in the bottom with a digging fork, then put down a drainage layer of gravel or coarse cinders to about one-quarter the total depth of the planter before adding soil.

It is wise precaution, too, to seal the inside walls of the planter with a bituminous waterproofing compound. Unless this is done, soil salts have a nasty habit of oozing through the porous bricks and making a dirty white scum on the outside walls, rather like the scummy deposit so often found on the outside of a clay flowerpot.

With a wooden window box, one very common fault is to knock together a planter out of a few odd pieces of scrap lumber without boring any holes in the bottom for drainage. These drainage holes are a must, for wood swells when damp, and the cracks close up and may no longer allow excess water to escape.

These holes should be big enough not to swell up and close, certainly not less than half an inch in diameter and an inch would be better. These holes should be covered, just as you cover the drainage hole in a flower pot, and for a window box I think about the best covering is squares of sod, cut neatly to fit the bottom of the box and placed grass side down.

These sods act as a filter, allowing excess moisture to drain away, while keeping the soil from washing out through the holes. At the same time, the sod layer functions as a sponge, storing a reserve of moisture under the roots of your plants. Sod works well in a brick or masonry planter, too, placed upside down over the drainage layer of gravel or coarse cinders.

The soil for window boxes and planters should be fairly open in texture but a bit more moisture-retentive than houseplant soil mixtures, for evaporation is rapid out in the sun and wind, and watering can become quite a bothersome chore.

Plain dirt from the backyard is hardly eversui table for use "as is," but it can be brought into satisfactory condition by mixing it with peat moss and sand. A good formula is three parts good garden topsoil, one part dampened peat moss, one part coarse sand and one part old rotted manure, preferably put through a sieve to take out the lumps. Add a garden fertilizer — NOT a lawn fertilizer — at the rate of one cupful per bucketful of soil mixture, and mix thoroughly.

In filling, make the soil firm enough so it won't settle too much after watering, and don't fill the box or planter too full. Always leave at least an inch at top so soil won't splash over the side when watering. Better still, leave two inches, then when your plants are in position, tuck them in with a one-inch blanket of peat moss. This gives a neat and pleasing appearance and helps conserve soil moisture.

Humanist and Smart

In selecting a doctor I've always tended to be influenced by the kind of magazines you find in their waiting rooms. I may even have given this factor more weight than is prudent.

I've been going to Reap, for example, for many years, and although his diagnoses are rarely what I would wish them to be, he subscribes to the New Yorker, the Saturday Review and Harper's, and I've got a lot of pleasure and enlightenment out of waiting for him.

When our sons were small, and going periodically to the pediatrician, I spent hours thumbing through Jack and Jill and the other children's magazines, until I became quite good at those little stories in which the word "be," for example, is represented by a picture of a bumblebee.

Occasionally, when one of Reap's diagnoses indicates the attention of a specialist, he packs me off to some classmate who may be very good at his specialty, but nine out of 10 times hasn't got a readable magazine on the premises.

Whereas the general practitioner's waiting room is likely to offer Life, Newsweek and McCall's, since he is at pains to please the general run of customers, the specialist tends to subscribe only to magazines that suit his own interests.

During one period when I was calling on an orthopedist for my back — due, as it turned out, to an imaginative but inaccurate diagnosis by Reap — I whiled away the minutes in the waiting room by reading Business Week, Fortune and Field and Stream.

I still have a back problem, but the orthopedist, I hear, has retired and gone to live in the woods.

The other day I had to take my wife to the doctor, because of her toe, and while I was waiting I started thumbing through a copy of Today's Health.

It turned out to be the current issue, with a test in it by which a person could find out what his innermost attitudes were toward women and the liberation movement.

By checking off your choice of the multiple answers to 18 questions, you were supposed to be able to rate yourself as a sexual fascist, a male chauvinist, a paternalist, a reformist, or a humanist — as sexual fascist of course being the worst and a humanist the best.

The first question was simple. It was about housework. I checked answer D — "I hate housework, but I do some of the chores occasionally."

I couldn't wait to see how I rated. I turned back to the answers. If you answered D, it said, you were a reformist; not bad, but not as good as a humanist.

"You are willing to make some concessions, but not to confront the total reality — that women are equal in intelligence."

Anyway, being reformist was certainly better than being a male chauvinist or a sexual fascist.

To be rated as a humanist, though, I'd have had to check answer E — "Just because housework is menial and boring doesn't mean it's woman's work. I share as much of it as possible before and after work and do at least half of the chores on weekends."

If you checked answer E, it said, "You accept the inequity of assigning all housework to women. You endorse the rights of every human being to express themselves to the fullest extent — even though this may mean a personal loss of power and radical changes in our present attitudes and institutions."

I finished the test and was adding up my score when my wife limped out of the doctor's office. It turned out I was a humanist.

Of course I may have cheated some. It wasn't hard to guess which answers would get you rated a humanist and which a sexual fascist.

On the way home it occurred to me that, as a humanist, I should rent my wife some crutches, but she said the doctor didn't recommend them.

He was right. The toe didn't give her much trouble at all, except once on the weekend when she ran over it with the vacuum.

The Loser Won

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — Still another anecdote from the Godfather: Singer Al Martino's role as the Sinatra-like singer, Johnny Fontaine, is small but powerful. It's his first movie and he does well with it, especially in a dramatic scene with Marlon Brando. How this all came about is something. "Here I am nervously waiting to do my first movie scene and with an actor of Brando's stature. I'm on the set early, studying my lines in an adjoining room. You know how thin those walls are on movie sets. Brando finishes his scene. He turns to Francis Ford Coppola, the director, and says: 'What are we shooting next?' Coppola says: 'The Johnny Fontaine scene with you.' Says Brando: 'Who's playing Fontaine?' 'Al Martino.' 'The singer?' 'Yes.'

"Then Brando hesitates. Don't forget I'm hearing all this as he says: 'Well, you better get him drunk so he can get though it.' I walked out of the soundstage and went down to a nearby liquor store and bought a bottle of Scotch. It made me late for my scene but it was worth it. I put the bottle on the table in front of Brando and said: 'I'll match you drink for drink.' Marlon and I hit it off from then on." Marlon later apologized to Martino for his remarks to Coppola. "He told me that he had a percentage of the gross (three per cent) and was worried about doing an important scene with someone who had never acted before. I told him that it didn't matter because the director didn't want me either." Martino was supposed to play the scene as a loser. No wonder it came off so well.

The album of Jesus Christ Superstar has reached a whopping $35,000,000 gross in world sales, putting it ahead of the Beatles' Sergeant Pepper. It's the top grosser of any British-produced album ever and done with virtually no home support. The album got lukewarm reception in the United Kingdom which prompted Robert Stigwood to debut the musical stage production on Broadway rather than London's West End. But there are signs that the so-called "Jesus movement" is waning on the movie side. Eve Meyer, the only woman distributor, said that her outlets inform her that she should find another title for The Jesus Trip, a movie she is distributing. Norman Jewison, however, is busily at work on reproduction plans for his movie version of Jesus Christ Superstar. It will shoot on actual locations in Israel.

David Clayton-Thomas, the guy who made Blood, Sweat and Tears, is out on his own now and his romance is Judy Loren—no relation to Sophia—who was seen with staples through her navel in the May centrefold of Playboy magazine. Some of the nude shots were made in David's bedroom in his Mandeville Canyon home, almost throwing his cleaning man into a state of nervous shock. The cleaner walked calmly into the bedroom to hang up David's clothes and here was Judy stark naked in the bed. Although there were five other men there taking pictures and working lights, Judy started screaming. The cleaning man, whom David describes as a Jackie Gleason Lost Soul type, immediately hid in the closet.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HOLTUM—In loving memory of my wonderful husband, Ron, whose untimely passing was one year ago today, June 2, 1971.
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
To sit and talk with him awhile,
To be together in the same old way
Would be my dearest wish today.
Dear Lord, forgive a silent tear,
A constant wish that he were here,
Others are taken, yes, I know,
But he was mine and I loved him so.
—So deeply missed and so lovingly remembered, his wife, Elsie.

SOMMERFIELD—In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Allen, who passed away June 1, 1967.
Wonderful memories woven in gold,
These are the memories we tenderly hold.
Deep in our hearts his memory is kept,
To love, to cherish and never forget.
—Sadly missed and always remembered. Mum, Ruth, Lue, Bill, Bob and families.

Further proof that sports is big business: Seattle's Channel 4 bid $91,788 to get the rights to show University of Washington football games (on film and a day late) this fall. That was more than $30,000 above its bid last year and well above the figures of $77,886 from Channel 5 and $74,555 from Channel 7. Just multiply all that cash by all the football-playing universities in the U.S. and you see what football means.

The Greek government TV network recently staged an on-the-air reunion of the general who headed the German occupation of Crete in 1944 and the Greeks and English commandos who kidnapped him right off the island. Everyone was all smiles, which prompts me to suggest similar reunions on TV, like Stalingrad's winners and losers or Diefenbaker and Pearson.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's answer — I swear by Cornelius Magillicuddy there will be no more major league baseball nicknames. The last were Nelson (Nellie) Fox, Jimmy (Double X) Foxx, Joe (Flash) Gordon, Fordham Flash Frankie Frisch and Al (Foot in the Bucket) Simmons. Experts knew Foxx and Simmons were White Elephants.

Today's question — Alan Ameche, Spurgeon Chandler, Rene Lacoste and Adolph Rupp all gained fame in branches of one field of endeavor. Kindly name the field and the individual branch of it for each. Answers Saturday.

"'Wednesday Afternoon Tennis' has been brought to you by the American Medical Association."

Friday Highlights

C-7:00 p.m.—Last of Billy Graham's North Carolina meetings—7.

C-8:00—A funny Laugh-In rerun stars Sandy Duncan—2, 6.

C-8:00—KVOS is flipping Avengers reruns all over the place. One is due at this time but I don't know if this is a permanent place—12.

C-10:00—A second run for the Oral Roberts country special with Roy Clark and other guests—6.

C-10:30—New time for You Asked for It—7.

CABLE 10—7:00 p.m., Yesterday Town; 7:30, Our Environment: Victoria's city core; 8:30, Form of Art; 9:00, Arts Calendar; 9:30, Project Travel; 10:00, Old Country Soccer, Hearts vs. Celtic.

Friday Movies

9:30 a.m.—Mr. Belvedere Rings the Bell (1951 Clifton Webb comedy, still fairly amusing). The one in the old folks' home—4.

C-12:45 noon—Passport to China (1961 spy stuff, still fairly poor), Richard Basehart. I was thinking of going to China but an hour after my passport arrived, I was hungry for freedom—6, 8.

4:00 p.m.—How to Stuff a Wild Bikini (1965 Annette Funicello). You want to know what's under the bikini? I am yellow, curious—7.

C-8:00—High Bright Sun (fairly good 1965 Cyprus war drama). Dirk Bogarde acts, Susan Strasberg uses the Method—8.

8:00—Thundering Gunslingers (1942 Buster Crabbe). He acted best when he strapped on his gun but there was much money in his method—13.

C-8:30—The Catcher (new missing-persons detective), Michael Witney, Tony Franciosa, Anne Baxter. A pilot that could be fair—5.

8:30—Sawdust and Tinsel (1953 Ingmar Bergman, by far today's best). The one about life in a seedy travelling circus—9.

C-9:00—Dead Men Tell No Tales (1971 suspense, not much), Christopher George, Judy Carne. Back to Bergman—7.

9:00—Anna and the King of Siam (popular 1946 King and I original), Rex Harrison, Irene Dunne. Almost a soaper but a quality one—12.

11:00—City That Never Sleeps (1953 policeman drama, a bit above par). The only reason for watching is Gig Young, who's so good an actor you don't notice it—11.

11:00—Billy the Kid in Texas (1940 Bob Steele). Leave him there—13.

11:30—Creatures of Destruction (1968 hypnotism hokum), Bill Williams. You're a trivia expert if you know his wife is Barbara Hale of the Perry Mason series—7.

C-12:00—High Bright Sun (see 8:00)—6.

12:00—Invasion (1962 no-names sci-fi). Miss it—8.

12:30—Sagebrush Family Trails West (1942 comedy cheapo), Bobby Clark. It makes most of the other dogs tonight look good—13.

C-1:00 a.m.—Adventures of Hajji Baba (1954 John Derek dog)—4.

1:05—Astounding She Monster (1957). According to KIRO, "an Amazon-type woman, in a metal suit which gives off radiation, emerges from a meteor and causes havoc." In June?—7.

2:05—Town Without Pity (1961 court drama), Kirk Douglas, E. G. Marshall. It's very late but this is a pretty good film—12.

Friday Radio

8:00 p.m.—The CBC lists a special on the 20-year history of Ontario's Stratford festival and calls it different but doesn't say in what way—CBU (690).

11:00—Soprano Anna Chornodolska, the CBC talent winner—CBU.

C—Color.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN
World Champions

When the opponents lead a singleton against one of your small slam contracts while also holding the ace of trumps, the future is very dark for your side. Usually only a very fortunate lie of the cards will save you. However, sometimes it can't hurt to look for some evasive manoeuvres rather than surrendering without a fight.

Today's slam hand is a good example of this principle. Declarer refused to give up and found a novel way to land his slam.

Dealer: North

♥ AKQJ7
♦ K3
♣ 82

WEST
♠ 65

♥ 109632
♦ J765
♣ 1093

SOUTH
♥ 84
♦ A
♣ AKQJ

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♥	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♠	Pass	4NT	Pass
5♦	Pass	6♠	All pass

Opening lead: Five of hearts.

The bidding was very reasonable, with South first making a jump shift and then asking about aces after hearing about the spade support. When South found an ace missing, he settled for a small slam.

West led the heart five which declarer won in dummy. Declarer wondered why West led dummy's suit and justifiably suspected that West had led a singleton.

However, even if he knew this as a certainty, what could he do to save the slam? He considered leading trumps immediately, since there was a chance that West might also hold only one spade and be unable to ruff. After some thought he rejected this hope because it was against the odds and because he found a better plan.

After winning the heart in dummy, declarer left the trump suit alone. Instead he led a diamond to his ace and then cashed two high clubs. He then played another high club and ruffed it in dummy with the trump eight.

Dummy's diamond king now provided a discard of South's heart loser and it was now safe to lead trumps.

A trump was led from dummy and East's ace won the trick. East knew that West had led a singleton and led a heart in some hope of promoting a trump trick by an "uppercut." However, declarer was in complete control.

He ruffed high, drew the outstanding trump and claimed his slam.

In bridge, as in other sports, it never pays to give up. A miraculous recovery will never save you unless you give yourself a chance.

EASY TO GET. The amount is limited only by the equity you have in your home. It could be $5,000, $10,000, maybe $25,000 or more. And there are never any bonuses or brokerage fees to pay.

EASY TO TAKE. Because you may be eligible for a special rate of interest.

EASY TO PAY BACK. We can spread the loan over many years — which means lower monthly payments. If you need cash, call us about a 1st or 2nd Mortgage Loan. It's easy money!

EASY MORTGAGE MONEY FROM ASSOCIATES

EASY TO GET. The amount is limited only by the equity you have in your home. It could be $5,000, $10,000, maybe $25,000 or more. And there are never any bonuses or brokerage fees to pay.

EASY TO TAKE. Because you may be eligible for a special rate of interest.

EASY TO PAY BACK. We can spread the loan over many years — which means lower monthly payments. If you need cash, call us about a 1st or 2nd Mortgage Loan. It's easy money!

ATTENTION:
COMMERCIAL AND REVENUE PROPERTY OWNERS . . . Did you know that a Realtors' Exchange Club has recently been formed in Victoria and will be holding its first regular meeting in the near future?
Realtors' Exchange Clubs have worked with amazing results in the United States for many years. It is a unique and effective way of handling real estate transactions. It enables owners to trade or exchange their equity from one property into another more desireable or suitable to their current needs.
If you are thinking of trading into or out of a commercial or revenue property, you owe it to yourself to find out just how easily and how quickly the Realtors' Exchange Club will work for you. For full details, call BILL CARNEGIE at 385-7761 or 478-6476.

OPEN HOUSE
3520 UPPER TERRACE
UPLANDS
SATURDAY 1:30-4:30
This lovely contemporary home is extraordinarily well built and expensively finished and offers you:
1—Magnificent master bedroom with de luxe en suite bathroom.
2—Two other bedrooms (or three and den) and two other bathrooms.
3—28' living-dining room with floor to ceiling fireplace.
4—Knotty pine kitchen with breakfast area.
5—Delightful easy care lot.
This is a home which, because of its design, would suit a couple or small family seeking spacious rooms and minimal upkeep and yet, could suit a larger family because of its potentially easy and inexpensive adaptation possibilities.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call.

LEAMINGTON SPA, England — Ray Stanley has asked local authorities to help him get a bigger house so he, his children, his wife and mistress can all live together conveniently and at less cost.

"It has become too much of a strain trying to divide my time and money between two families," said Stanley. "It would be better all-round if we could all live under one roof."

Stanley, 46, earns $65 a week as a garbage collector for Leamington Spa municipality, the authority he hopes will allow him a subsidized new home.

He lives in a one-room apartment with his mistress, Pat Higgins, and their two children, Sheila, 4, and Christopher, 2. He pays the equivalent of $11.70 a week in rent.

Stanley gives his wife, from whom he parted five years ago, $26 a week for rent and food.

"The arrangement would suit me," said Mrs. Stanley.

"We are getting a divorce and we could all live together as one big happy family. I know what a struggle it is for Ray to keep up both homes."

PARIS — Chaim Duwolk, 67, the grand rabbi of Cairo, is waiting in a Paris hotel for a visa to start life anew in Brooklyn. The rabbi said there are about 400 Jews left in Egypt. He said it took him three months to obtain permission to leave. He hopes to join his two married daughters in the U.S. when the visa comes through.

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Andreas Baeder, sought as the mastermind of a terrorist group, the so-called Baeder-Meinhoff gang, was captured after a gunbattle with police here. The gang was responsible for a wave of political bombings, police claimed.

OTTAWA — Arthur Bremer, accused of shooting Alabama Governor George Wallace, was questioned by a Mountie as he stood about 10 feet from a road used by President Nixon during his April visit to Ottawa, Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said. Meanwhile, Wallace's wife Cornelia began campaigning in California for her partially-paralysed husband who is a write-in candidate in the June 6 Democratic presidential primary. Mrs. Wallace also said it was the stomach wound that almost killed her husband not the bullet lodged near the spine.

WASHINGTON — The FBI announced it is seeking Frederick William Hahneman, 49, of Easton, Pa., a Honduran-born American engineer, as the alleged hijacker of an Eastern Air Lines jet who parachuted over Honduras May 6 with $303,000 in ransom. After tracing the suspect's identity from testimony of witnesses aboard the hijacked Boeing 727, the FBI obtained a federal warrant in U.S. district court in Alexandria, Va., charging Hahneman with air piracy and kidnapping. The maximum penalty for hijacking a plane is death.

Acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray III indicated in his announcement that Hahneman — or a man closely resembling him — was believed still alive in a rural area of Honduras. That country's authorities began a search immediately after the hijacker bailed out of the Eastern plane.

Sorry Japan Sends Envoy

Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

TOKYO — A stunned Japanese government Thursday sent a special envoy to Israel to offer a formal apology for the mass murders committed by three Japanese at Tel Aviv's Lod airport Tuesday.

Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda also announced that the government "without worrying about legal theories would like to show its sincerity by offering solatium (compensation) to the families of the dead and to the wounded" because the murders were committed by Japanese.

"There has not been an incident which has caused such a loss of international faith in Japan," he declared.

Keni Fukunaga, a former chief cabinet secretary, was dispatched as the government's special envoy to carry a message of apology from Prime Minister Eisaku Sato.

Fukunaga described his mission at a news conference as like "one sitting on a straw mat embedded with spikes."

"The heinous crime does not represent the true image of the Japanese . . . we must do whatever we can to have Japan and its people understood clearly by the outside world," Fukunaga said.

Shortly before Fukunaga's departure by plane, national police identified the lone survivor of the three attackers as Kozo Okamoto, 24, a student at Kagoshima University in southern Kyushu.

Police said Okamoto was a younger brother of Takeshi Okamoto, one of nine so-called United Red Army radicals who hijacked a Japan Air Lines jetliner to North Korea in 1970 and remained in Pyongyang.

The other two attackers are dead — one killed himself with a hand grenade and the other was slain by Israeli police.

The Red Army was made up of fanatic Marxists whose violent antics kept them in the headlines in Japan for years.

Berlin Agreement Saturday

Difficulties Cleared

BONN (LAT) — The way was apparently cleared Thursday for the Big Four foreign minister to activate their historic Berlin agreement on Saturday.

Last-minute difficulties between the West Germans and the Soviets threatened to delay the ceremony — possibly for some time, as Western diplomats pointedly told the Germans. The difficulties concerned the documents of ratification of the Soviet-German treaty, which were to be exchanged simultaneously with the signing of the Berlin agreement.

The Germans reportedly wanted to attach an appendix to the document which would include the ratification law, plus letters and parliament resolutions restating the Soviets rejected this, and for some tense hours Wednesday and Thursday it appeared that Saturday's ceremony in Berlin might not come off after all.

LAKE COWICHAN — The road to Lake Cowichan winds through stands of trees that have turned many shades of green in the magic of a brilliant June 1 afternoon. Up ahead, the mountains loom blue and grey and bear the last trace of winter snow.

There is, instead, the sad story of men's conflict; a worsening family fight within B.C.'s biggest union; reports

Mountie Calls Gaglardi 'Bloody Maniac'

'I was born dangerous, I live dangerous and I'm going to die dangerous'

KAMLOOPS (CP) An RCMP officer said Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi drove like "a bloody maniac" as the B.C. cabinet cavalcade sped here from Prince George Wednesday.

The unidentified officer made the blunt comment after Gaglardi, passing a truck on a hill, refused to pull over for an oncoming car and forced it off the road.

"I was born dangerous, I live dangerous and I'm going to die dangerous," the minister said when asked about his driving Thursday.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson admitted he was concerned about the speed with which Premier Bennett and his cabinet are driving on a tour of the province.

The cavalcade, preceded by an RCMP vehicle and including Bennett's chauffeur driven limousine, has reportedly exceeded the speed limit many times since the tour began in Victoria last Saturday.

But Wednesday, the cavalcade became strung out en route to Kamloops and the RCMP officer said some cars were driving at 90 miles an hour to catch up to the leaders over a highway which is under construction in places.

The incident involving Gaglardi occurred near 100 Mile House as the cavalcade, led by an RCMP car with its red light flashing, pulled out to pass a large truck on a curving hill.

About four vehicles were passing the truck when another car came around the curve. Instead of pulling in behind the truck, Gaglardi accelerated his rented car and passed it, forcing the oncoming car to the shoulder of the road in a cloud of dust and gravel.

Peterson said later he was not in the cavalcade at the time but agreed that the convoy practice is dangerous.

"Convoys are a dangerous way of travelling," he said.

Premier 'Hell-Bent' For Servants' Clash

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Government Employees' Union said Thursday that Premier Bennett "appears hell-bent on provoking a militant confrontation between the provincial government and its employees."

The BCGEU said in a statement that Bennett told a news conference in Kamloops Wednesday night that he would not consider reversing his policy of withholding bargaining rights from provincial employees.

"It almost appears that the Premier has not been informed about the recent series of wildcat strikes in the provincial government service," said John Fryer, union general secretary.

He said about 2,000 provincial employees, mostly highways workers, have sacrificed a day's pay by staying off work to draw attention to the bargaining rights issue.

Fryer said he is afraid more and longer disruptions of government services may well be inevitable unless the Premier takes one of his "second looks" at government policy on bargaining for its employees.

Bennett Beckons Voters

A wide-ranging package of "money-in-your-pocket" proposals was delivered to B.C. voters Thursday by Premier Bennett in a speech that appeared to set the stage for an election late this summer.

Bennett, speaking at a Kelowna Chamber of Commerce luncheon, labelled his five-point financial assistance program the Kelowna Charter 1972, but B.C. Tories later called it a "steal" of their policies and Liberals scoffed that it was "flim-flam campaign promising."

The proposals would require government action at the next legislative session, which would normally open in January, 1973.

Leading the list of measures offered by Bennett is the cancellation of provincial succession duties and gift taxes.

Other points in the Kelowna Charter:

- A provincial supplementary allowance to senior citizens. Bennett gave no figures.
- An increase in B.C. social assistance benefits to persons who are handicapped through age, mental or physical disability. Size of the hikes was not specified.
- An increase in the minimum wage scale in B.C. from the present $1.50 an hour. Bennett did not say what the increase would be.
- Social assistance to high school and university-aged youth for training on the job through and employees' subsidy in which the government will share in payment of wages and salaries.

Bennett also talked about the government's recent announcement to form a new supply low-interest loans for the processing of farms products and for secondary manufacturing.

Lingual Licks Return

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons opened the door Thursday for another merry-go-round on bilingualism in the public service, agreeing to call the Public Service Commission before a committee to explain any changes in the merit principle of hiring and promotion.

The action followed tabling in the Commons Wednesday of the 1971 PSC annual report. The commission oversees hiring, promotion and classification of about 216,000 federal employees across the country.

Prime Minister Trudeau, making a special statement on the report, said it was tabled "as a routine matter." But press treatment, "possibly based on misunderstanding," was causing concern.

Newspaper reports were that the merit principle is "being abandoned" or is "on the way out," Trudeau said.

While he could find nothing on the report to back this up,

The Marxist Palestinian guerrilla group responsible for the Japanese terrorists' gun-and-grenade attack at Tel Aviv's Lod airport said Thursday it will escalate operations against Israel and "hit the interests of the enemy" everywhere.

The warning came as the death toll in Tuesday's assault rose to 26 and the Lebanese army went on alert in anticipation of Israeli reprisal raids. The Middle East News Agency said Israeli warplanes [illegible] for about 20 minutes Wednesday.

A Montreal woman, Mrs. Louna Sabbah, and 15 American citizens from Puerto Rico on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land were among the dead. Another 81 tourists and other civilians were wounded when the three guerrilla-trained Japanese opened up with automatic weapons and grenades against the unsuspecting crowds in the arrival hall.

Israeli authorities late Thursday placed Lod under the tightest security precautions since the 1967 war.

There was no official explanation, but the national radio said authorities fear a black attempt and the newspaper Ma'Ariv said earlier that more Japanese radicals were in Europe waiting for a chance to strike.

America To Keep Power Margin

WASHINGTON (UPI) Within minutes of returning from the Moscow summit, President Nixon told Americans Thursday night that the Soviet-American arms control agreement will assure that "no power on earth . . . will be stronger than the United States of America in the future."

Addressing a joint session of Congress and a nationwide broadcast audience, Nixon said the accords were "in the interest of both nations." He urged their approval by the House and Senate to protect U.S. interests.

"I can assure the Congress and the American people tonight that the present and planned strategic forces of the United States are without question sufficient for the maintenance of our security and the protection of our vital interests," the weary president told applauding legislators in the House chamber.

He reported that the agreements he brought back from his eight-day visit to the Soviet Union represented "the beginning of a process that can lead to a lasting peace."

Man Spotted with Hong Shortly Before Shooting

A break in the Frank Hong murder case came Thursday when Victoria police issued the description of a man seen talking to the Fisgard Street fish-store owner minutes before he was shot — and appealed to the public for help in finding him.

The Colonist also learned a reward offer may come soon from Victoria's Chinese-Canadian community.

An inquest has been called into the single-shot death for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in McCall's chapel, 1400 Vancouver, before Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

Hong, 44, a native of Victoria and owner of the one-man Rainbow Fish Co. wholesale store at 560 Fisgard, was found in his office shortly after 8:05 a.m. Wednesday, the victim of a shot between the eyes from a .38-calibre weapon. Police still belive the shooting occurred in the course of a robbery attempt.

The discovery was made by his lifelong friend Ed Lum, a Saanich alderman, who used to drop by around 8:05 daily — around 20 minutes after Hong arrived — so they could have a cup of coffee at a nearby restaurant before opening for daily business.

Staff Sgt. Walter Calwell, acting head of the Victoria police detective division, said "an independent witness" saw a man talking to Hong in the front doorway of the store at about 8:05.

The man was described as Caucasian, about 40 years of age, and estimated five feet, 10 inches tall, slender, clean-

Phone-Threat Reports Cast Pall Over Lake Cowichan

Fallers, Too, Split in Union Fight

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

LAKE COWICHAN — The road to Lake Cowichan winds through stands of trees that have turned many shades of green in the magic of a brilliant June 1 afternoon. Up ahead, the mountains loom blue and grey and bear the last trace of winter snow.

But in this peaceful setting, and others like it on Vancouver Island, the contentment you would expect to find is not always there.

There is, instead, the sad story of men's conflict; a worsening family fight within B.C.'s biggest union; reports of threats against men and their families.

"The cowardly bastards — the cowardly bastards," says a man who is known simply in the forest industry as a faller and who, as such, is among the elite in terms of earning power. In his camp last year, fallers averaged $15,000 to $17,000.

He is a faller who wants to work, but does not because of the wildcat walkout of 800 fallers that began in mid-April.

His remarks are made as he listens to reports that fallers who are opposed to the stoppage are receiving telephone threats.

"The bastards," he repeats.

Fernie Viala, vice-president of the IWA's Duncan local, furnished an affidavit from one man who claims to have been told he had better not report for work "if you know what's good for you."

Viala and other officers of the local say there have been reported threats to burn down homes or put sugar in car gasoline tanks.

But the report that brings the curse from the one faller is that some phone calls are made to wives and children of fallers while the fallers are away from home.

At Lake Cowichan on this fine afternoon, four militant fallers who represent the other side — who back the walkout fully — express grave doubts about the authenticity of the alleged threats.

Nels Olson, who has lived the 17 years of his life at Lake Cowichan, and who has carved his living out of the woods like his father did before him, seems saddened by the fact that such reports would crop up.

"I don't know of anyone who would do this," he said quietly. He bases this on his

Comox-Strathcona Director Criticized

Dissatisfaction Spurs Electoral Zone Bid

COURTENAY — Royston Improvement District trustees are dissatisfied with their regional district representative and according to a letter from Sid Donaldson, secretary of the improvement district, Royston wants to form its own electoral area.

When the letter, which was a copy of one sent to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, was read, regional directors questioned whether the letter represented just the views of trustees or of the members of the improvement district.

The letter to Campbell said: "The trustees of this district would appreciate advice at your early convenience on the procedure to be followed to establish this district as an electoral area otherwise than as part of area 'A' of the regional district of Comox-Strathcona as it is presently constituted.

"It is deemed in the best interests of the electorate in this district that a director representing it on the regional board, should be elected to that office as the possible solution to representation by a director who is pre-occupied with other parts of the area and completely lacks a desire to maintain or attempt to reciprocate even informal communciation with the largest segment of the area he is expected to represent."

The incumbent director for electoral "A", Baynes Sound and the Islands, is William Johnson. He made no comment on the letter but director Andrew Harvie, who represents Cumberland, came to Johnson's defence.

Harvie pointed out that the letter came from the trustees and questioned if it had come with the sanction of the ratepayers.

The regional board decided to defer any action on its part until 1971 census figures are received. Chairman Ken McDonald said the board would be in a better position to make a decision at that time.

COURTENAY — The Comox Valley Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has been given sympathy but no barn.

The SPCA had requested use of a poultry barn at the exhibition grounds as an animal shelter. The grounds are administrated by Comox-Strathcona Regional District.

According to the minutes of the committee which were circulated at the recent regional board meeting, the request was refused because the operation would not be "compatible with other operations conducted on the grounds."

The recreation committee did give approval in principle to the North Vancouver Island Horse Association, to offer horsemanship and trail riding at the exhibition grounds between June 15 and Sept. 15.

COURTENAY — Comox Valley residents will pay respects to Canada's Governor-General and his wife when Roland Mitchener and Mrs. Mitchener visit here.

Scheduled to arrive in Comox about 8:30 a.m. the couple will tour the Comox Valley including Courtenay and Cumberland, according to present plans.

The entire visit is expected to last 90 minutes. At 10 a.m. the governor-general and his wife will board an aircraft for return trip to Ottawa.

COURTENAY — Goods valued at $2,000 have been reported stolen from a private storehouse on Lake Trail Road.

RCMP said John McQuillan reported a list of household appliances which were taken from his storehouse sometime during Wednesday night.

The items taken were: a fridge, dryer, a deepfreeze, dresser with mirror, two chairs, two bedside tables, coffee table, two end tables and a tape deck.

Also missing from a trailer parked beside the storehouse are a propane range and tanks and a toilet bowl.

Investigation into the matter is continuing.

Fishermen Fined $20

PARKSVILLE — Two Victoria anglers, William Purdy and George MacDonald, were unable to persuade the department of fisheries officer that half of the 16 salmon found in their possession had been caught on the previous day when they were stopped for inspection while fishing at Nanoose Bay.

A charge was laid by the officer and they appeared before Judge A. P. Musgrave in Parksville Provincial Court. Both pleaded guilty and were fined $10 each.

NANOOSE BAY — A salmon derby open to blind persons only will be held Saturday at Beachcomber Marina from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

This event is being sponsored by boat owners of the Beachcomber area and entrance to the derby is free.

PARKSVILLE — District 69 Society of Organized Services has a long record of service to this district in providing many facilities which would otherwise be lacking here. Among these are a thrift shop, family guidance, homemakers service, medical assistance, volunteer drivers and others. Now something new has been added in the provision of a calendar events and a job registry service.

Anyone interested in casual work may contact the family guidance office in Parksville listing type of job and telephone number. Those wishing to have work done can then check with the S.O.S. and the service is open to students and adults.

The calendar of coming events will provide an easy reference for clubs and organizations planning events.

SALTAIR — Saltair ratepayers go to the polls this Saturday to vote on a referendum that would authorize the regional district of Cowichan Valley to provide fire protection to Saltair residents.

PORT ALBERNI — A Port Alberni man Thursday was fined $250 and had his driver's licence suspended for one month for impaired driving.

Donald Allan Loiselle was charged on the first day of British Columbia's new get-tough program aimed at reducing the number of impaired and drunken drivers in the province.

Loiselle asked the court if he could use his driver's licence during working hours only. He was told that the new law, which came into effect at midnight Wednesday night, make a licence suspension mandatory.

Fallers Pick Six Men For Table

Fallers engaged in a wildcat strike against the British Columbia coast forest industry Wednesday elected six men to represent them at the bargaining table once master contract negotiations resume.

The 800 striking fallers have been off the job since mid-April in an attempt to get a standard pricing formula. The walkout has blocked master contract negotiations affecting 28,000 woodworkers on the B.C. coast.

An attempt by the regional council of the International Woodworkers of America to have bargainers elected last weekend backfired when Vancouver Island fallers refused to participate. They protested the presence at meetings in the logging camps of fallers who have continued to work.

On Wednesday, about 30 fallers met at a downtown Vancouver hotel and chose six men to speak for the six union locals representing fallers.

Spokesman Chuck Evans said the fallers also elected two other representatives from each of the six locals in case they are needed in the negotiations.

However, Evans said the fallers' steering committee still has not had any direct contact with the 11-man negotiating team of the IWA.

The current IWA contract expires June 15 and the union has demanded an across-the-board increase of $1 an hour plus improved fringe benefits. The forest companies, represented in bargaining by Forest Industrial Relations Ltd., has not yet made a counter-offer.

Labor Minister James Chabot indicated Wednesday he will make an announcement this week regarding the stalled negotiations.

He said the IWA and FIR are reviewing his proposal that a joint committee be established to look into the fallers' dispute. Chabot has suggested the fallers' dispute is the key problem blocking master negotiations.

Tough Rule Used

PORT ALBERNI — A Port Alberni man Thursday was fined $250 and had his driver's licence suspended for one month for impaired driving.

Donald Allan Loiselle was charged on the first day of British Columbia's new get-tough program aimed at reducing the number of impaired and drunken drivers in the province.

Loiselle asked the court if he could use his driver's licence during working hours only. He was told that the new law, which came into effect at midnight Wednesday night, make a licence suspension mandatory.

DUNCAN — There will be two days of Indian canoe racing at Quamichan Lake during the annual Cowichan Indian Days scheduled for the weekend of June 17 and 18. Track events will be held June 17 at the improved Somenos Sports Field. Competitors will come from the B.C. mainland and the U.S. Pacific Northwest for all events.

COURTENAY — Summer Stage '72 will be presented in the Civic Theatre June 8 to 10 with Star Spangled Girl, starring Heather Smith, Ted Little and Don Wilkes and directed by Mrs. Alice Winsby. Other plays will be produced in July and August.

NANAIMO — Roderick Haig Brown, noted Island conservationist, will narrate at the blessing of the Pacific fishing fleet planned for June 11 at 1 p.m. in Burrard Inlet's English Bay.

PORT ALBERNI — Mrs. Jean Moore, the 50-year-old Port Alberni mother who underwent a history-making vertebrae operation is reported in satisfactory condition in Victoria's Royal Jubilee Hospital.

NANAIMO — Former Nanaimo resident Don Gerlitz will receive his BA in French from the University of Calgary at convocation today.

Hetty displays emperor and empress

Burls Bound For Orient

By HELEN MITCHELL
Colonist Correspondent

CAMPBELL RIVER — Part of Sayward's famous outdoor art gallery, Valley of 1,000 Faces, will be going to Japan this fall along with creator Hetty Fredrickson and her husband Douglas.

Two hundred of Mrs. Frederickson's face paintings on cedar burls, that have been displayed in her gallery will be part of the more than 1,000 paintings that will be shown in Tokyo. There will also be 400 new paintings of faces, 200 North American birds on half rounds of alder, 150 Canadian wildflowers, 50 oil canvasses, and 25 B.C. logging scenes on hemlock and cedar burls.

Included in the collection are two very special portraits, of Hirohito and his beautiful Empress. Altogether, more than three tons of paintings will accompany the Fredericksons when they sail from Seattle Sept. 4, on the Washington Mail bound for Yokohama.

Mrs. Fredrickson says that a publicity campaign for her art exhibition was launched last June by the Chunichi newspaper chain, one of the biggest publishers in Japan. Arrangements have been made through the English Conversation Education Centre to sponsor a hall in Tokyo where the paintings will be displayed for a month. She is making the trip on her own. None of her paintings will be for sale.

From Tokyo Mrs. Fredrickson hopes to travel to Moscow by ship and rail with her art works. From there she will go to her hometown — The Hauge — in Holland for a special kind of presentation.

"This will be a very private showing," she says, "for my parents only."

Lake Cowichan Tunes In to Skies

LAKE COWICHAN — First phase of a $1 million microwave system linking B.C. Tel's radio network with the communications satellite Intelstat IV has been completed.

The system was put into service Thursday and now picks up signals transmitted from Intelstat IV near here at the earth station operated by the Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corporation.

Previously, calls received from Pacific Rim countries were picked up by earth stations at Jamesburg, Calif., and Brewster Flats, Wash., and were played to Vancouver via land line and microwave.

"It started with the erection of the building and tower at Marie Canyon," said Edwards. Marie Canyon is the COTC, radio site built specifically as a relay centre for transmissions and is located nine miles east of here.

The Mount Bruce microwave station on Salt Spring Island will act as a temporary go-between for Marie Canyon and the radio tower atop the B.C. Tel's main building in Vancouver, Edwards said.

The Marie Canyon site is ideal for a satellite earth station because it is relatively free from radio interference signals. The high mountains surrounding the valley act as a natural shield.

"The cutover (Thursday) represents completion of the first phase of the project," said Edwards. He said the second phase will introduce four television channels as well as two CN Telecommunications, two COTC and two Trans-Canada Telephone System "super-group spectrums" to the network (A super-group spectrum is equal to 120 voice channels).

The improved B.C. Tel facilities will be able to accommodate transmissions from both Intelstat IV and a new domestic satellite to be placed into orbit this year.

Meanwhile, officials in Ottawa said Thursday that Telesat Canada expects to start commercial operations Jan. 1 within the original estimates of $90 million in expenses.

Telesat says in its annual report that the government and telecommunications common stock carriers have each acquired a 50 per cent interest in Telesat for about $30 million each. The public is expected to acquire a one-third interest in the company at a later date.

Telesat said it is borrowing $30 million from the finance department to complete financing for the satellite system. The company expects to repay the loan through sale of shares to the public.

Culinary Workshop Cooking

NANAIMO — The vocational division of Malaspina College will host a summer-long workshop on cooking skills this year, in co-operation with the B.C. Teachers Federation.

Starting July 4, the workshop will provide a course in basic skills and practical techniques to high school home economics teachers from all over the province.

"The workshop has proven extremely beneficial to new teachers just graduating from university," said Jim Engler, head of the cook training division at the school.

It will conclude on August 31.

Six members of the faculty of the heavy duty mechanics classes will be attending a conference in Vancouver June 19 to 30.

The conference, offered by Finning Tractor Limited, will introduce delegates to the latest procedures, in testing hydraulics, new developments in the heavy equipment industry and advances in new systems on the heavy equipment.

Harbor Alternate 'Logical'

NANAIMO — The proposed plan for development of Nanaimo Harbor cannot be carried out without having a serious effect on marine life in the Nanaimo River estuary, according to the president of the Greater Nanaimo Civic Affairs Committee.

In a letter to the Nanaimo Harbor Commission, B. F. Ogden said his group is not opposed to development of the city's shipping facilities but is opposed to doing so at the expense of the environment.

"We agree with the alternative site proposed by the Concerned Citizens Committee as a logical place which would have a far less damaging effect on our environment not only our marine life," Ogden stated.

Ogden . . . "ridiculous"

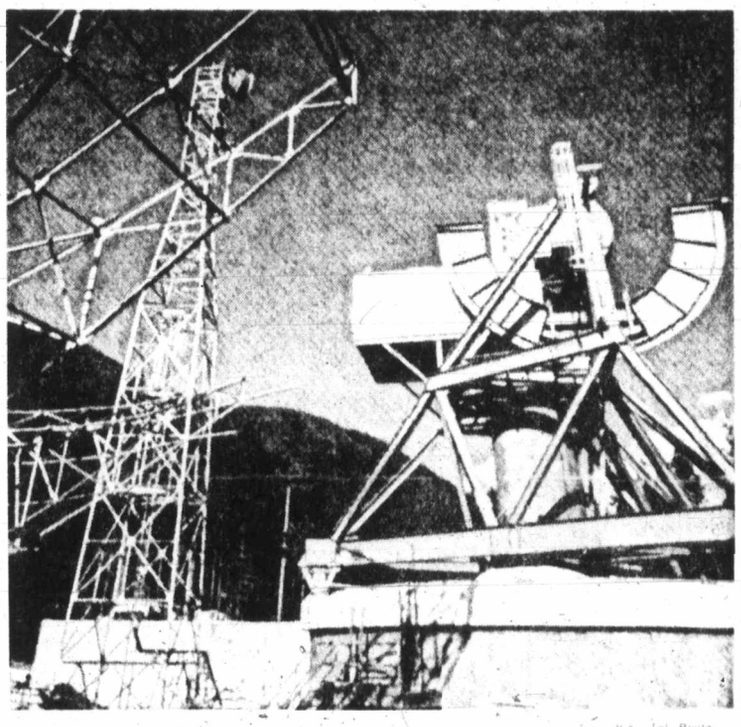

He said people living on the nearby Indian reserve, for instance, are faced with an industrial complex of sawmills, chipper mills "or what have you" practically on their doorsteps.

Ogden said contrary to the commission's statement that the alternate would be too costly because it would mean buying mostly private land, "this is not the case. The land all along Northumberland Channel from Dodd Narrows out to the end of Jack's Point — with the exception of Harmac millsite and Hooker Chemical Co. — is practically all vacant. Most of it is presently controlled by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. tree farm licence No. 19."

Ogden said it is "ridiculous" to dig up and block the estuary nearly half way across when "there is ample land not too far away."

He called on the commission to cancel plans to start digging up the flats and to begin planning on ways and means of getting the required land from MacMillan Bloedel and "other land speculators."

"We realize that when you come up against MacMillan Bloedel you are up against one of the most powerful monopolies in B.C.," he said. "But you will have the support of the vast majority of the citizens, but if you continue to plan to destroy part of an important resource you will run into increasing opposition."

Variety of Children's Camps All Ready for Summer Rush

By JOHN LANGTON
Colonist Correspondent

QUALICUM — This summer many children will be going to various summer camps that are operated annually on Vancouver Island. Most camps have a religious background and some have special training courses. In most cases parents will pay their childrens' fees — but some campers will be sponsored by churches and service clubs.

The Anglican church operates Camp Columbia on Thetis Island south of Nanaimo. The Pentecostal and United Church each have summer camps at Nanoose and the United Church has 12 other camps in B.C. including one at Shawnigan Lake.

The Island Sunday School Mission has Camp Imadene at Maple Bay near Duncan. Camp Ross near Bamfield on the west coast of the Island is run by the Shantymans' Association. The YMCA and the YWCA have Camp Thunderbird situated about 20 miles from Victoria.

All these camps offer a variety of activities for young campers. There is swimming, fishing, boating, sports, crafts and campfires. Bible study is also included at many camps. Some camps run training programs.

Camp Homewood on Quadra Island near Campbell River is one of these with special programs. In addition to family camping there are leadership training camps for boys and girls. Wilderness camping trips on Quadra Island and in Strathcona Park are also organized. Some of these wilderness hikes last for a weekend and others for five days. Information can be obtained from Erik Bjorn at Box 40, Heriot Bay, B.C.

Camp costs range from $28 for a week at some of the church camps on up to $180 for leadership courses. The costs include accommodation, food and participation in the camp programs. There are tuck shops at some of the camps but as they are not intended to supplement regular meals, children are frequently limited in their daily spending on candy and soft drinks.

Brochures on the camps indicate that safety of the children is a prime consideration. Every camp has a registered nurse in attendance. Parents are notified immediatey if anything more than minor accidents occur.

Accommodation is usually in huts, but in some camps tents are used. Meals are generally prepared by cooks and not the campers.

Various local organizations and churches help children to attend camps when parents do not have sufficient financial resources. In addition District 69 Society of Organised Services has some sleeping bags which are loaned to children it sponsors.

In school district 69, S.O.S. has formed a committee which is in contact with the public health nurses, the schools and the department of rehabilitation and social improvement. Children referred to the committee are screened to see if S.O.S. can help them attend a camp.

District 69 S.O.S. is a non-profit organization which was set up to help the less fortunate people in the area.

The Kiwanis have a camp on the shore of Lake Cowichan, which has been designed and built for handicapped children and adults. Activities are designed to give campers a certain amount of therapy as well as enjoyment.

Dr. Sven Jensen, directs a camp during the last two weeks of August for children with learning disabilities and emotional problems. Often these children have above average intelligence. The camp known as Camp Nan-Wah-Kaw makes use of the Kiwanis facilities at Lake Cowichan.

Camp Nan-Wah-Kaw is organized and financed by an organization named Vancouver Island Camp for Special Children and is registered under the Societies Act. The directors believe that a child needs direction and guidance in order to come to realize his full potential and that he needs discipline in order to learn self discipline. This can take place in an atmosphere of fun and trust.

Youth To Help Self

DUNCAN — Lack of medical facilities for indigent youth is a very real problem and one which has to date been overlooked in Duncan. But several teachers and physicians have decided to do something about it and the first step to raise funds has begun already.

Jim Southward, head of the English department at Cowichan senior high school, along with teacher Judie Sheibourn, has organized an evening of music and poetry Friday night at the Girl Guide hall on Cairnsmore Street in Duncan, to raise money to set up the needed medical services.

Southward said six students from the high school will be reading their poetry and local musicians will be playing. Southward feels the students' writing is as good or better than many of the present generation of poets.

In describing their work he said poetry "keeps changing and for the most part gets better with each generation."

The Guide Hall will be turned into a coffee house for the night to create a more casual atmosphere for the poetry. Southward feels the evening will serve a dual purpose as it will expose Duncan youth to six excellent poets as well as raise funds for the needed medical services.

CLRA Lockout Worries Mayor

NANAIMO — Mayor Frank Ney is hoping the construction lockout will end soon.

His main concern at the present moment is construction of additional boat docking facilities at Newcastle Island provincial park.

The mayor said Thursday that materials and equipment for 600 feet of additional moorage ramps and 12 mooring buoys are stockpiled on the shores of the island, waiting for construction crews to return to work.

The men on the job have been locked out, along with about 50,000 other construction workers across the province, for more than five weeks in a dispute with Construction Labour Relations Association over wages, hiring practices and other contentious points.

The new mooring facilities had been scheduled for completion by July 1, the normal starting date for a heavy influx of tourists to the Nanaimo district.

THE ACES
World Champions

ON BRIDGE
by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

When the opponents lead a singleton against one of your small slam contracts while also holding the ace of trumps, the future is very dark for your side. Usually only a very fortunate lie of the cards will save you. However, sometimes it can't hurt to look for some evasive manoeuvres rather than surrendering without a fight.

Today's slam hand is a good example of this principle. Declarer refused to give up and found a novel way to land his slam.

♥ A K Q J 7
♦ K 3

WEST

♦ J 7 6 5
♣ 10 9 3

SOUTH
♠ K Q J 10 7 2
♦ A
♣ A K Q J

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♦	Pass	6 ♠	All pass

Opening lead: Five of hearts.

The bidding was very reasonable, with South first making a jump shift and then asking about aces after hearing about the spade support. When South found an ace missing, he settled for a small slam.

West led the heart five which declarer won in dummy. Declarer wondered why West led dummy's suit and justifiably suspected that West had led a singleton.

However, even if he knew this as a certainty, what could he do to save the slam? He considered leading trumps immediately, since there was a chance that West might also hold only one spade and be unable to ruff. After some thought he rejected this hope because it was against the odds and because he found a better plan.

After winning the heart in dummy, declarer left the trump suit alone. Instead he led a diamond to his ace and then cashed two high clubs. He then played another high club and ruffed it in dummy with the trump eight.

Dummy's diamond king now provided a discard of South's heart loser and it was now safe to lead trumps.

A trump was led from dummy and East's ace won the trick. East knew that West had led a singleton and led a heart in some hope of promoting a trump trick by an "uppercut." However, declarer was in complete control.

He ruffed high, drew the outstanding trump and claimed his slam.

In bridge, as in other sports, it never pays to give up. A miraculous recovery will never save you unless you give yourself a chance.

LAKE COWICHAN — The road to Lake Cowichan winds through stands of trees that have turned many shades of green in the magic of a brilliant June 1 afternoon. Up ahead, the mountains loom blue and grey and bear the last trace of winter snow.

But in this peaceful setting, and others like it on Vancouver Island, the contentment you would expect to find is not always there.

There is, instead, the sad story of men's conflict; a worsening family fight within B.C.'s biggest union; reports

Mountie Calls Gaglardi 'Bloody Maniac'

KAMLOOPS (CP) — An RCMP officer said Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi drove like "a bloody maniac" as the B.C. cabinet cavalcade sped here from Prince George Wednesday.

The unidentified officer made the blunt comment after Gaglardi, passing a truck on a hill, refused to pull over for an oncoming car and forced it off the road.

"I was born dangerous, I live dangerous and I'm going to die dangerous," the minister said when asked about his driving Thursday.

'I was born dangerous, I live dangerous and I'm going to die dangerous'

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson admitted he was concerned about the speed with which Premier Bennett and his cabinet are driving on a tour of the province.

The cavalcade, preceded by an RCMP vehicle and including Bennett's chauffeur-driven limousine, has reportedly exceeded the speed limit many times since the tour began in Victoria last Saturday.

But Wednesday, the cavalcade became strung out en route to Kamloops and the RCMP officer said some cars were driving at 90 miles an hour to catch up to the leaders over a highway which is under construction in places.

The incident involving Gaglardi occurred near 100 Mile House as the cavalcade, led by an RCMP car with its red light flashing, pulled out to pass a large truck on a curving hill.

About four vehicles were passing the truck when another car came around the curve. Instead of pulling in behind the truck, Gaglardi accelerated his rented car and passed it, forcing the oncoming car to the shoulder of the road in a cloud of dust and gravel.

Peterson said later he was not in the cavalcade at the time but agreed that the convoy practice is dangerous.

"Convoys are a dangerous way of travelling," he said.

Bennett Beckons Voters

A wide-ranging package of "money-in-your-pocket" proposals was delivered to B.C. voters Thursday by Premier Bennett in a speech that appeared to set the stage for an election late this summer.

Bennett, speaking at a Kelowna Chamber of Commerce luncheon, labelled his five-point financial assistance program the Kelowna Charter 1972, but B.C. Tories later called it a "steal" of their policies and Liberals scoffed that it was "flim-flam campaign promising."

The proposals would require government action at the next legislative session, which would normally open in January, 1973.

Leading the list of measures offered by Bennett is the cancellation of provincial succession duties and gift taxes.

Other points in the Kelowna Charter:

- A provincial supplementary allowance to senior citizens. Bennett gave no figures.
- An increase in B.C. social assistance benefits to persons who are handicapped through age, mental or physical disability. Size of the hikes was not specified.
- An increase in the minimum wage scale in B.C. from the present $1.50 an hour. Bennett did not say what the increase would be.
- Social assistance to high school and university-aged youth for training on the job through an employees' subsidy in which the government will share in payment of wages and salaries.

Bennett also talked about the government's recent announcement to form a new supply of low-interest loans for the processing of farms products and for secondary manufacturing.

Premier 'Hell-Bent' For Servants' Clash

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Government Employees' Union said Thursday that Premier Bennett "appears hell-bent on provoking a militant confrontation between the provincial government and its employees."

The BCGEU said in a statement that Bennett told a news conference in Kamloops Wednesday night that he would not consider reversing his policy of withholding bargaining rights from provincial employees.

"It almost appears that the premier has not been informed about the recent series of wildcat strikes in the provincial government service," said John Fryer, union general secretary.

He said about 2,000 provincial employees, mostly highways workers, have sacrificed a day's pay by staying off work to draw attention to the bargaining rights issue.

Fryer said he is afraid more and longer disruptions of government services may well be inevitable unless the Premier takes one of his "second looks" at government policy on bargaining for its employees.

Lingual Licks Return

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons opened the door Thursday for another merry-go-round on bilingualism in the public service, agreeing to call the Public Service Commission before a committee to explain any changes in the merit principle of hiring and promotion.

The action followed tabling in the Commons Wednesday of the 1971 PSC annual report. The commission overseas hiring, promotion and classification of about 216,000 federal employees across the country.

Prime Minister Trudeau, making a special statement on the report, said it was tabled "as a routine matter." But press treatment, "possibly based on misunderstanding," was causing concern.

Newspaper reports were that the merit principle is "being abandoned" or is "on the way out," Trudeau said.

While he could find nothing in the report to back this up,

Man Spotted with Hong Shortly Before Shooting

A break in the Frank Hong murder case came Thursday when Victoria police issued the description of a man seen talking to the Fisgard Street fish-store owner minutes before he was shot — and appealed to the public for help in finding him.

The Colonist also learned a reward offer may come soon from Victoria's Chinese-Canadian community.

An inquest has been called into the single-shot death for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in McCall's chapel, 1400 Vancouver, before Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

Hong, 44, a native of Victoria and owner of the one-man Rainbow Fish Co. wholesale store at 560 Fisgard, was found in his office shortly after 8:05 a.m. Wednesday, the victim of a shot between the eyes from a .38-calibre weapon. Police still believe the shooting occurred in the course of a robbery attempt.

The discovery was made by his lifelong friend Ed Lum, a Saanich alderman, who used to drop by around 8:05 daily around 20 minutes after Hong arrived — so they could have a cup of coffee at a nearby restaurant before opening for daily business.

Staff Sgt. Walter Calwell, acting head of the Victoria police detective division, said "an independent witness" saw a man talking to Hong in the front doorway of the store at about 8:05.

The man was described as Caucasian, about 40 years of age, and estimated five feet, 10 inches tall, slender, clean-

America To Keep Power Margin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Within minutes of returning from the Moscow summit, President Nixon told Americans Thursday night that the Soviet-American arms control agreement will assure that "no power on earth . . . will be stronger than the United States of America in the future."

Addressing a joint session of Congress and a nationwide broadcast audience, Nixon said the accords were "in the interest of both nations." He urged their approval by the House and Senate to protect U.S. interests.

"I can assure the Congress and the American people tonight that the present and planned strategic forces of the United States are without question sufficient for the maintenance of our security and the protection of our vital interests," the weary president told applauding legislators in the House chamber.

He reported that the agreements he brought back from his eight-day visit to the Soviet Union represented "the beginning of a process that can lead to a lasting peace."

The president and his wife flew directly to the Capitol by helicopter after their arrival at Andrews Air Force Base from Warsaw, Poland, the last stop in his 13-day, 16,586-journey.

The Marxist Palestinian guerrilla group responsible for the Japanese terrorists' gun-and-grenade attack at Tel Aviv's Lod airport said Thursday it will escalate operations against Israel and "hit the interests of the enemy" everywhere.

The warning came as the death toll in Tuesday's assault rose to 26 and the Lebanese army went on alert in anticipation of Israeli reprisal raids. The Middle East News Agency said Israeli warplanes flew over southern Lebanon for about 20 minutes Wednesday.

A Montreal woman, Mrs. Louna Sabbah, and 15 American citizens from Puerto Rico on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land were among the dead. Another 81 tourists and other civilians were wounded when the three guerrilla-trained Japanese opened up with automatic weapons and grenades against the unsuspecting crowds in the arrival hall.

Israeli authorities late Thursday placed Lod under the tightest security precautions since the 1967 war.

There was no official explanation but the national radio said authorities fear a hijack attempt and the newspaper Ma'ariv said earlier that more Japanese radicals were in Europe waiting for a chance to strike.

Phone-Threat Reports Cast Pall Over Lake Cowichan

Fallers, Too, Split in Union Fight

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

● Fallers pick six for talks. Page 25

LAKE COWICHAN — The road to Lake Cowichan winds through stands of trees that have turned many shades of green in the magic of a brilliant June 1 afternoon. Up ahead, the mountains loom blue and grey and bear the last trace of winter snow.

But in this peaceful setting, and others like it on Vancouver Island, the contentment you would expect to find is not always there.

There is, instead, the sad story of men's conflict; a worsening family fight within B.C.'s biggest union; reports of threats against men and their families.

Viala
. . . cites threats

"The cowardly bastards — the cowardly bastards," says a man who is known simply in the forest industry as a faller and who, as such, is among the elite in terms of earning power. In his camp last year, fallers averaged $15,000 to $17,000.

He is a faller who wants to work, but does not because of the wildcat walkout of 800 fallers that began in mid-April.

His remarks are made as he listens to reports that fallers who are opposed to the stoppage are receiving telephone threats.

"The bastards," he repeats.

Fernie Viala, vice-president of the IWA's Duncan local, furnished an affidavit from one man who claims to have been told he had better not report for work "if you know what's good for you."

Viala and other officers of the local say there have been reported threats to burn down homes or put sugar in car gasoline tanks.

But the report that brings the curse from the one faller is that some phone calls are made to wives and children of fallers while the fallers are away from home.

Olson
. . . faith in ethics

At Lake Cowichan on this fine afternoon, four militant fallers who represent the other side — who back the walkout fully — express grave doubts about the authenticity of the alleged threats.

Nels Olson, who has lived the 47 years of his life at Lake Cowichan, and who has carved his living out of the woods like his father did before him, seems saddened by the fact that such reports would crop up.

"I don't know of anyone who would do this," he said quietly. He bases this on his

Architects' Old Town Planning Day Has 'Preposterous' Result

Professionals Play Games With City

By HUBERT BEYER

"It's absurd . . . it's preposterous . . ."

That was Victoria's Mayor Peter Pollen commenting Thursday on a suggestion made a few minutes earlier by Toronto architect Harry Kohl that the city buy all property in the Old Town area, then re-develop the downtown waterfront sector as it wished.

"To suggest that we spend $100 million to control development in Old Town" didn't make sense, Pollen said.

The discussion was one of many which turned the usually quiet and subdued atmosphere of the theatre into a series of lively scenes.

The occasion: A design game aimed at producing an "instant development plan" for Old Town, the area between Government and Wharf, Fisgard and the Causeway.

The players: Six teams of architects from across Canada attending the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada's annual convention.

The rules: Each team pursued its plans on a different basis and philosophy, ranging all the way from complete government expropriation of the area's property to letting present decay take its natural course.

Models Built

Groups of architects were huddling in corners, discussing their specific tasks; others were furiously drawing plans; high school students taking part in one team effort, made their views known on what Old Town should be like. Models were constructed, torn apart and reconstructed.

Kohl of Toronto insisted the city should only exercise control over the area if it owned the property. But he modified his plan by limiting the land to be expropriated to the waterfront.

"Where is the morality if you impose your restrictions on the land owner?" Kohl asked.

Stanley King of Vancouver said any redevelopment of Old Town must be undertaken slowly. No plan should be superimposed by planners and architects. Residents must be asked what environment they wish to live in.

Bird Sounds

King was working with a team of architects and several high school students. Here are a few of the points which the students said should be considered:

He said it should be a "fun place" where people like to go. He suggested that a "little choo-choo" run along the waterfront, transporting people to various attractions.

Hamilton called for a master plan that should define the height of buildings, the location of parking areas, pedestrian movement and waterfront walkways.

He warned that too much planning might play havoc with the desired results. Europe's most beautiful cities had evolved without long-range plans and restrictions.

Peter Hemingway of Edmonton said he had inspected the Old Town area and had "come away angry."

Low Scale

Developers should be given tax incentives. Traffic in the area should be "eliminated to a large extent." Densities of buildings should be increased to create a "busy alive redevelopment of Old Town."

Gordon Atkins of Calgary advocated an intricate pattern of pedestrian movement at different levels throughout Old Town. Promenades should be built; new buildings should be on a low scale; good quality buildings should be retained.

The sixth team, led by Joseph Baker of Montreal dropped out of the game after the terms of reference were set. Baker insisted that there was no real problem in Old Town.

What was the "plan-in" good for? Were there any tangible results?

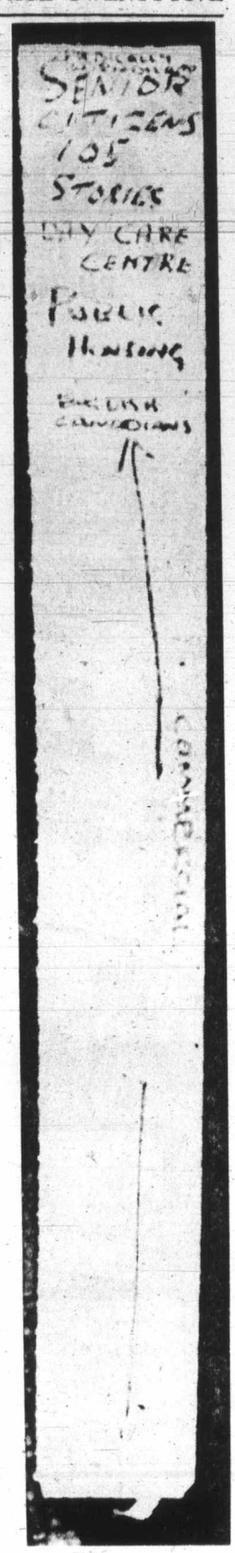

Not really, according to Sam Bawlf, Victoria developer and restorer of historic buildings to contemporary use.

"The results aren't really so important. The main thing is that here we have, probably for the first time, a dialogue between experts and interested citizens. This sort of forum should be held on a continuous basis," Bawlf said.

105-storey joke

'Cynic's' Offer

Highflying Solution

Montreal architect Joseph Baker, referred to by some of his colleagues as "the ultimate radical cynic" offered his own tongue-in-cheek solution Thursday to the problem of redeveloping Victoria's Old Town.

Because Old Town would "always be a problem," Baker suggested that the entire area be levelled and a 105-storey building be erected in the centre.

Developing his theme, which in a later interview he called "a joke born out of utter frustration and sadness," the architect said:

"Just to show you that we are sociologically responsible, we'll put alll the physically-handicapped in the 105th floor; elevators will be installed at a later date."

Senior citizens, he mused, could be accommodated on the 104th floor "where they wouldn't get in the way."

Baker
. . . out of sadness

Further down, there would be provision for public housing, the Chinese community, English Canadians and commercial space. Ethnic groups could also find room in the building, Baker theorized.

The rest of the area, he offered, could be blacktopped. If that wasn't enough parking space, the Inner Harbor could be filled with garbage and also be blacktopped.

In this fashion, he explained, Victoria could solve its constant waterfront dispute and also pioneer a unique land-fill project.

He told fellow architects, in Victoria to attend the annual convention of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, they are "self-centred opportunists." Instead of solving the real problems of big Canadian cities, in Victoria they were going through a ritual of redesigning a part of a city that didn't have any real problems.

Some of them, including a number of architects, rose to denounce Baker. They called him paranoic and destructive. They accused him of tearing down without offering alternatives himself.

Baker, 43, teaches architecture at McGill University, Montreal. In an interview later, he said the proceedings at the theatre made him very sad.

"They come in here to conduct a half-day design blitz knowing absolutely nothing about the city, the people, their dreams and wishes."

While Toronto, Montreal and other cities were having real problems like housing shortage, the architects were playing games in Victoria, a city that didn't have any problem, Baker said.

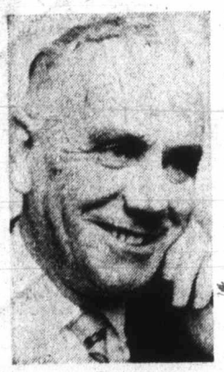

"Architects should act as informed citizens. Instead of going through the role of providing stereotyped development plans, they should concern themselves with problems like housing and transportation."

Instead of selling out to clients, often against their better judgement, architects should work for the real clients — the people.

The design game, aimed at producing a variety of redevelopment plans for Old Town, was a waste of time. So, he said, was the entire convention.

Mandatory Under New Law

Robinson
. . . little purpose

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

Victoria traffic court Judge E. F. N. Robinson stopped giving licence suspensions Thursday as the B.C. government's new system of mandatory suspensions for convicted impaired drivers went into effect.

Robinsoh explained in an interview outside Victoria Provincial Court's traffic section he felt the legislation had left the matter of licence prohibitions in the hands of the Motor Vehicles Branch superintendent.

Therefore, he said, "my feeling is there would be little purpose in my questioning" a driver on whether the licence was needed.

Motor Vehicles Act amendments passed last spring by the Legislature provide an automatic one-month licence suspension as of Thursday for a first offence of impaired driving, driving with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent or failing to take a breath-analysis test.

They also provide suspensions for six months or possibly more for second or subsequent similar offences within five years, with the superintendent making the decision on length of suspension.

Robinson said he had "given the matter considerable thought" and added his feeling the Legislature had left prohibitions entirely up to the superintendent was based on both the mandatory suspensions and the fact the superintendent also can "restrict the validity of the licence to certain hours and purposes."

These powers for the superintendent "made me feel there would be little purpose in my questioning a man with respect to occupation and so on to find out whether he needed his licence."

The judge, who handles most of the drinking-driving cases to come before the three-section court, imposed fines in the usual $300 to $400 range on five such cases to come before him Thursday morning.

Other court sources said it was possible the new mandatory one-month suspension for a first offender could work to the driver's advantage. In some courts, including the one where Robinson presides, the usual driving ban for first offenders has been three or four months.

Some judges were said to feel the superintendent might add a mandatory suspension if they ordered suspensions on their own, so their decision may be to follow the new law and let the superintendent take over the job in full.

Condition Fair

Robert Alcock, 19, of 76 Hampton, Saanich, was reported in fair condition Thursday night at Royal Jubilee Hospital with head injuries received Wednesday night in a bicycle accident. Victoria police said that Alcock's bicycle, a 10-speed, was in collision with a bicycle driven by Douglas Carswell, 18, of 2885 Parkview Drive, Saanich, at the southwest corner of Woodward's parking lot.

Gati Is Undaunted By City Turndown

Victoria Symphony Orchestra conductor Laszlo Gati is somewhat disappointed, but far from dispirited, over Victoria city hall's rejection Thursday of his proposal for summer concerts in Centennial Square.

"This is just the beginning, not the end," he said, "of a plan that could expand Victoria's tourist season and build up the cultural interests of its residents."

City council earlier in the day shot down Gati's effort to win permission to stage open-air concerts in Centennial Square during the summer months.

Aldermen said they liked the idea, but they gave the following reasons for turning down Gati's request:

- Ald. Ove Witt — "This is going to cost a lot of dough. It's a very costly affair. It would also conflict with parking arrangements we have with the MacPherson Theatre."
- Ald. Harold Olafson — "I don't see how we can close a public square for two hours every day during a seven-week period."
- Ald. Alf Hood — "I think it's physically not feasible to provide 2,000 chairs in time for the summer season, rope off the square etc. on such short notice."

Gati

Gati proposed a series of concerts — a Sunset Promenade — from 6 p.m. to 7:15 p.m. in Centennial Square. He was asking council's finance committee for a grant to get started, and for the use of 2,000 chairs to be set out for the audience.

Admission would be $2 for reserved seats, $1 for the others. Half-price season tickets would be available, "and of course fringe area standing room would be free and unlimited — the more the better."

Gati earlier had been turned down by the provincial government in a bid to stage these concerts in Heritage Court, by the museum. The difficulties in closing off the necessary space in order to charge admissiog was a factor in that case.

"I believe we've at least started the thinking process in both municipal and provincial governments," Gati said Thursday evening.

"Concerts such as these, embodying symphonic, ballet and light opera music, and even jazz, would be a great attraction for tourists and a boon to the city's cultural life."

Gati envisioned the project as self-supporting, with a good chance that initial get-started grants could be repaid the first year.

There will be two free concerts this summer by Victoria's symphony orchestra, although the location has yet to be pinned down. These are made possible through sponsorship of the recording industries trust fund of the musicians' union.

Meanwhile, Gati is beginning his plans for the summer of 1973.

Ready To Bargain

Fallers Choose Team

Fallers engaged in a wildcat strike against the British Columbia coast forest industry Wednesday elected six men to represent them at the bargaining table once master contract negotiations resume.

The 800 striking fallers have been off the job since mid-April in an attempt to get a standard pricing formula. The walkout has blocked master contract negotiations affecting 28,000 woodworkers on the B.C. coast.

An attempt by the regional council of the International Woodworkers of America to have bargainers elected last weekend backfired when Vancouver Island fallers refused to participate. They protested the presence at meetings in the logging camps of fallers who have continued to work.

On Wednesday, about 30 fallers met at a downtown Vancouver hotel and chose six men to speak for the six union locals representing fallers.

Spokesman Chuck Evans said the fallers also elected two other representatives from each of the six locals in case they are needed in the negotiations.

However, Evans said the fallers' steering committee still has not had any direct contact with the 11-man negotiating team of the IWA.

The current IWA contract expires June 15 and the union has demanded an across-the-board increase of $1 an hour plus improved fringe benefits. The forest companies, represented in bargaining by Forest Industrial Relations Ltd., has not yet made a counter-offer.

Labor Minister James Chabot indicated Wednesday he will make an announcement this week regarding the stalled negotiations.

He said the IWA and F.I.R. are reviewing his proposal that a joint committee be established to look into the fallers' dispute. Chabot has suggested the fallers' dispute is the key problem blocking master negotiations.
